EUROPE.

French Relations with Rome—The Monsignor's Religious Service Suspended—Gen by the Pope—The Armaments—The Spanish Clergy.

PARIS, March 20.—The Marquis of BAUMEVILLE, the Roman Ambassador, is expected to arrive here to-day. He has received a congé for eight days, and has been summoned hither for consultation.

ROME, March 20.—It is believed that the absence of Marquis of BAUMEVILLE will last three weeks. The discussion in the Council on the twenty-one canons of the Church will not begin until he returns to Rome. The answer to the note of Count DARU demanding admission of a French representative to the Council has not yet left Rome, as was reported. The Pope forbade the French prelates from celebrating mass for the soul of the Count de MONTALEMBERT, considering it a demonstration of hostility to the Ecumenical Council. An Italian Bishop officiated, and the Pope attended in one of the galleries. As the ceremonies took place while the Council was in actual session, few of the Bishops could assist. The arrival is expected here of an agent of ALI PASHA charged with obtaining concessions to calm the agitation of the Armenians, caused by the infringement of their privileges by the Papal Court.

MADRID, March 20.—The official Gazette publishes a decree requiring the Bishops and clergy to take the oath to the Constitution within one month.

PARIS, March 20.—Mecklenburgh has ratified the treaty for the abolition of the Scheldt dues.

Preparations for the Bonaparte Trial—Popular Interest at a High Pitch—The Disturbances in Macon.

PARIS, March 20.—Prince BONAPARTE has arrived at Tours in charge of an officer of the gendarmerie, and accompanied by a chief officer of the Police. PASCHAL GROUSSET, who sent VICTOR NOIR to Prince BONAPARTE on the morning of the fatal affray, and M. MILLIERE, both on the editorial staff of La Marseillaise, are also in Tours as witnesses. ROCHEFORT, GROUSSET and MILLIERE were transported in charge of officers, because undergoing sentence as prisoners at La Sainte Pélagie. Arrangements have been made to send telegraphic reports of the progress of the trial to the Emperor every two hours.

LONDON, March 20.—A dispatch from Tours reports that the city is excessively crowded with strangers, eager to witness the trial of PIERRE BONAPARTE. The trains to that point are overloaded with passengers.

LISBON, March 20.—The Portuguese Government will send an expedition to restore order at Macao.

JAPAN AND CHINA.

The Feeling Excited by the Omoshi Disaster—Expulsion of Christians—Chinese Opposition to Foreigners.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 19.—Japanese advices to Feb. 8, by the Oceanic, are important. At Yokohama the Omoshi disaster agitated the community during the entire month. Capt. RYAN was allowed to take passage in the Japan, notwithstanding the repeated requests and final demand of Mr. DELONG, the American Minister, upon the British authorities for his arrest and criminal trial. The sentence of the Court suspends Capt. RYAN for six months. The Americans are malcontent, not only at the sentence, but in consequence of the intolerable English insolence to which Mr. DELONG was subjected during the investigation. Capt. ROE, Chief of Staff of the United States steamer Delaware, had reached Yokohama, and would immediately hold a Naval Court of Inquiry. The only bodies found are those of Capt. WILLIAMS and the ship's carpenter.... The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Banda ran afoul and immediately sank the North German ship Carrie Jane. The crew were saved.

The Japanese authorities were pursuing what few native Christians escaped deportation, and it is said that they now demand that the foreign Ministers and missionaries shall be prohibited from teaching the native in any way promulgating their faith. From Hiogo, Nagasaki and Osaka there are terrible accounts of native Christian persecutions and deportations. Sex and family ties are wholly disregarded....At Yeddo from four to five thousand houses were destroyed by fire on the 6th or 8th of February. The American Consulate narrowly escaped destruction....There is a bad feeling toward foreigners in all directions. The foreigners in Japan, and especially the foreign officials, are narrowly watched and guarded.

The news from Hong Kong, Feb. 11, is as follows: At Hong Kong the loss of the Oceanic created a profound sensation, and cast a gloom over the community....Capt. FARLEMAN, who was wrecked in the bark Ellory, died in the hospital from the effects of his exposure....Business in China was generally suspended on account of the New-Year celebrations....At Tientsin the weather was cold and business dull.... At Foochow there had been trouble on account of an attempt by the Mandarins to prevent a shipment of compradores by English merchants. It was reported that a price had been set on the heads of certain foreigners....Shanghai advices state that the Emperor was receiving mirrors and household furniture from Paris....The Chinese steamer Confucius had been lost on the Yangtze River....The French steamer Tasker had arrived via the Suez Canal....The Pekin Government has issued a proclamation offering to all rank, title and office. (!)

Further Details—Funeral of Capt. Williams at Yokohama.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—All of this morning's papers contain editorial comments on the proceedings of the Naval Court of Inquiry held in Yokohama on the Oceanic disaster, and all condemn its action. The course pursued by Admiral ROWAN is reported, that officer having left Yokohama on the 4th of February. The excursion was very amusing. Admiral ROWAN and Lieut.-Com. MILLER were the chief promoters. The French, Prussian and Russian ministers, the Admiral of the Russian fleet, many naval officers of various nationalities, the Governor and such a large concourse of citizens were in attendance. The weather was fine, the sea smooth, and the boat, a large one, which was the first built in New-York, and the pride of pilots, of which one was on New-York.

The Sunday Services in Congress—Speech of Senator Sherman.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The Navy Department is extremely anxious for assistance, both through Admiral ROWAN, commanding the Pacific Squadron, and the State Department, in the prosecution of the investigation into the Oceanic disaster. Letters are daily received at the Department from the friends and relatives of the victims of the collision, for additional details concerning the action of the Department regarding the recovery of the bodies. As no satisfactory answer can be made until full reports shall be received.

THE INDIANS.

A Protest Against Territorial Government of the Cherokee Nation.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The principal chief and delegates of the Cherokee nation of Indians have sent a memorial to the Senate, remonstrating against a territorial form of Government, legislative jurisdiction of Congress, the abrogation of existing treaties, and the burden of Government taxation without representation; and in favor of the payment by the United States of all just obligations to the said nation. The memorial concludes as follows:

A bill has been introduced into the Senate proposing to pay, under severe restrictions, two millions of dollars for the lands taken under the treaty of 1866. That bill was not submitted to us for our consideration or approval, and in various particulars violates that treaty. It is objectionable to us in all its features; and without entering into a discussion of it, we beg, Senators, to assure you in the most respectful manner that it will never be accepted by the Cherokee nation; and if we were to consent to it, it would not only be contrary to our own convictions, but place us in such disgrace with our people at home that we could scarcely have the assurance to return to them. We beg to say that nothing could have induced us to refer to the proposed legislation, except the fact that it bears directly upon us. In this view of the subject, we hope to be considered blameless."

A Comanche Attack on a Wagon Train—A Counter Attack—Eight Savages Killed—A Woman Carried off.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—A statement from Austin, Texas, is to the effect that a party of Comanche Indians recently made an attack between San Saba and Comanche, in that State, on four men, driving them from their wagons. The Indians took the wagons, and chopped them up and left. The bodies of two Indians, killed during the fight, were afterward found. The white men all escaped. A party of men was raised immediately and started in pursuit and came upon the Indians in their camp. A fight ensued, which resulted in the Indians being defeated, and six of them killed. One white man was killed. It is also stated that every raid the Indians make on the frontier, more or less of the white men are killed or women and children butchered or carried away, and a great many more whites are killed than Indians.

Another statement says, on the 6th inst. a party of Indians came within three miles of the Fort McKarette military post, and carried off a Mrs. PIRKIN.

Correspondence Between Gens. Sheridan and Sully—The Pagan Massacre.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 20.—The following correspondence will be published in the Tribune to-morrow morning:

HELENA, Montana, March 6.

To Lieut.-Gen. P. H. Sheridan, Chicago:

GENERAL: I see by to-night's papers a telegraphic dispatch from the Associated Press in regard to BAKER's attack on the Piegans, which may place me in a false light in regard to what I have written to the Interior Department, and what are my opinions in regard to the Indian question. The telegraphic report makes it appear as if I censured the actions of Col. BAKER and the military authorities, and as your name is brought in this same telegram, I take the liberty of sending you my report to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs on the subject. Please excuse the mistake which I did not intend to make. I had not time before the mail started to have another copy made.

(Signed) A. G. SULLY,
Lieutenant-Colonel Third Infantry.

Gen. SULLY says:

"I have delayed making my official report to you concerning the late attack of Col BAKER's command on a camp of the Blackfeet. Col. BAKER'S attack was a complete surprise, and the punishment he gave them was one of the best severe lessons that the Indians have received. It is to be hoped that this lesson will inspire them with some respect for the Government. The small-pox, which they had at the time, has since spread fearfully among them. This may strike every tribe of them among them and make them more inclined this Winter than they ever before have been to make arrangements with the nations next Spring that will secure peace in this section of the country for a year or two at least. For I do not believe perfect peace can be procured till measures are taken to stop the Indians north of the line from stealing horses and selling them to the Indians in the Dominions. However, in about two months matters will develope themselves, and we will be better able to form an opinion of what their future conduct will be."

A MINING ACCIDENT.

Fall of a Carriage 300 Feet—Two Men Seriously Injured—Murdered.

SCRANTON, Penn., March 20.—On Thursday night a serious accident occurred at the Delaware and Hudson Canal Shaft No. 1, known as Kern's Shaft, situated near Plymouth, by which ten men were seriously, though not fatally, injured. From some derangement in the machinery the carriage, on which was a car containing the ten men, started down the shaft without the counterbalancing weight. Before it reached the bottom the brakes were applied, but not quick enough to stop the carriage, although its fall was much lessened in velocity. The shaft was 300 feet deep....On Friday evening a man named EVERETT VAN LOON, son of Ex-Sheriff SAMUEL VAN LOON, was shot by JOHN GALLAGHER in a drunken row in JAMES'S tavern, in Plymouth. He died in less than two hours. GALLAGHER was arrested, and finally committed to jail to await trial. The same night a man was shot in the hand and arm in a row at the Boston mine, near Plymouth.

FIRES AND DISASTERS.

A Block Burned in Boston—A Blockhouse in Providence Destroyed—Fall of a Church Steeple in Fall River—Many Persons Injured.

BOSTON, March 20.—Gove block, a six-story structure, corner of Green and Pitts streets, caught fire last night and required the united efforts of three divisions of the Fire Department to quench the flames. The roof of the entire block, extending down Pitts street three hundred feet, was turned off. The three upper stories were completely destroyed, and the lower floors drenched with water. The total loss was $80,000, divided between the American Suspender Company, the Eyles Tool Company, the Leavitt Sewing-machine Company, L. L. Barber, sewing-machines, Edwards, Parsons & Kershaw, sales, E. Beaty, stores, the Boston Milling and Manufacturing Company, and other owners of the building. GEORGE DEMARY, of engine No. 15, was caught in the upper story and narrowly escaped suffocation. He was rescued by his comrades at great peril.

BARNEY & HARDY carriage manufactory, in Hathorn street, was damaged by fire, which broke out an hour later. A loss of $4,000 was caused, E. C. PRATT, harness-maker, Forrest & Jones, soft waters, and T. H. RICE, shoe-dealer, suffering slight injuries.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 20.—The blockhouse and dye-works of S. MERRY & Co., in Pawtucket, were almost entirely destroyed at 11 o'clock, on Friday night, by the explosion of a tank. The tank was filled with yarn for scouring, and a spark, having lodged in the drain conducting from the dyehouse, caused the disaster. The loss is estimated from ten to ten thousand dollars.

FALL RIVER, March 20.—This afternoon while a large congregation was assembled in and in the French Catholic Church to witness the christening of the owner's infant, the floor gave way and about two hundred people fell twelve feet into the cellar. Twelve or fifteen are known to have had limbs broken, and many others are injured.

RICHMOND, VA.

The Convention of the Royal Mayors Continued—Quiet Maintained—The Action of Gov. Walker.

RICHMOND, March 20.—The city is quiet tonight. Mayor ELLISON's police are in possession of the city. Mayor CAHOON's force of forty men are still in their Station-house, around which a large crowd of blacks has been gathered all day. Gov. WALKER has sent a reply to Gen. CANBY's letter, in which the Governor quotes all the acts of Congress on the subject to show that Gen. CANBY had no shadow of authority for interfering in the municipal affairs, unless called on by the Legislature or State authorities, nor has he any authority in the orders issued by the President or the Secretary of War. He says it is clear, from a letter written by Gen. CANBY to Major CAHOON on the 16th inst., that Gen. CANBY had determined to protect CAHOON in exercising the functions of an office which, under the laws of the State, he did not and could not hold. Gov. WALKER says that as the chief Executive officer of the State he will see its laws faithfully performed, and when he finds the power of the State inadequate he will call in the aid of the United States. He contends that in a municipal difference in New-York, neither Gen. CANBY nor any military officer would have interfered, nor should it be done in Virginia, a State that stands on the same footing in the Union with any other. An appended letter from Mayor ELLISON states that Gen. CANBY, on the night of the 17th inst., said he would get CAHOON's friends to advise him to withdraw his men from the Station-house, and ELLISON should discharge his special Police and take possession. The next day Gen. CANBY himself took possession.

A Collision Between Ellison's Police and the Negroes—Several Persons Killed.

RICHMOND, VA., March 20—Midnight.—A dense crowd of blacks standing all day around CAHOON's head-quarters at the Third Station-house, to blockade up the streets that to-night Mayor ELLISON determined to clear them away. At 11 o'clock he sent a force of men there, who proceeded to clear Jefferson street. They were fired upon by the negroes and RICHARD BUSH, a member of the special force, was instantly killed, and Capt. WILLIAM KNOX wounded. The Ellison Police then fired on the crowd, who, after resisting the attack, were driven off. The negroes carried their dead and wounded. If there were any, with them. The Police succeeded in clearing the streets, and at this time all is quiet. BUSH's body was taken to the City Hall.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Official intelligence was received here today that matters in Richmond were all quiet again, and that the troops which were ordered into the city have retired to their camp. As usual, the only persons who were injured in the recent affray were colored men, and, as a matter of course, Republicans. To the Republicans the Governor of Virginia recommended the Courts of law for their rights; to his rebel Democratic friends he substantially said, "Take the bludgeon for the security of your rights." The prompt and discreet action of the President in making the appointments necessitated by the emergency of Friday last is highly commended here.

CUBA.

The Captain-General Endeavoring to Negotiate Peace.

HAVANA, March 20.—Captain-General DE ROMAN, accompanied by Secretary FERRERMAN and Gen. FERRER DE CENTO, of the New-York Gerente, and his full staff, sailed this afternoon for Nuevitas. On his arrival there he will proceed to Puerto Principe. Gen. MAXIMINO ARANGO, late of the rebel army, arrived in Havana this morning, and sailed with the Captain-General, in order to aid him with his influence in the restoration of peace.

Affairs in Mississippi—The Republicans and Gen. Ames.

MEMPHIS, March 20.—A special dispatch to the Avalanche, from Jackson, Miss., says: "In the House, yesterday, a resolution was passed allowing each member one dollar's worth of postage stamps per annum. The Committee appointed to decide what officers were necessary for the Legislature, reported yesterday that it was absolutely necessary to have thirty-four beetles the Speaker of the House, President of the Senate and the Committee clerks. The Republicans, in caucus, resolved to re-elect Gen. AMES to the United State Senate, in case of his rejection by that body.

Miscellaneous Telegrams.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 20.—The contract for constructing the Connecticut Valley Railroad, running parallel with the Connecticut River from this city to Saybrook, forty-four miles, was on Saturday awarded to the well-known contractors, CLYDE & DILLON, who are to complete the work before the close of next Winter. They will commence immediately at about twelve different points. The bid was in the neighborhood of $600,000, and they take $7,000 per cent. of it in stock.

CINCINNATI, March 20.—The Grand Jury of the Hamilton Court yesterday found bills of indictment against three members of the Board of Public Works and RUFUS ROSE and CARL CHAPMAN, architects of the new Court-house. The bills charge the parties above-named with erecting a building dangerous to the lives of the workmen and the future occupants thereof, &c., contrary to the peace and dignity of the people of the State of Illinois. The testimony taken by the Grand Jury, and upon which they have found the bills, is kept secret for the present.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—Last night an attempt was made to blow up and residence of the Belgian Consul. The building was considerably damaged, but no one was injured....The reports from the Salt Diego gold fields are favorable. A large number of ledges have been found, some of which are very rich. The placer diggings are not extensive. Two mining districts have been formed, and a town has been laid out.

OGDEN, Utah, March 20.—The largest train that has ever passed over the Union Pacific Railroad arrived here to-night. The train consisted of fifteen cars, carrying over 400 passengers. The track is in splendid condition. Gov. SHAFFER arrived here today, but left again for Salt Lake.

CINCINNATI, March 20.—The base-ball season will probably open on the 16th of April, with a game between the Red Stockings and a picked nine. The Red Stockings will bat in the same order as they did last year, and occupy the same positions. They are practising daily.

NEW-HAVEN, March 20.—Mayor FYTCH has called a special meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners for next Monday, to receive the charges against Chief of the Police WILLIAM J. BOWERS, who, it is asserted, was fastened, on Saturday evening, in committing a criminal assaultment act. The city was much excited on the subject today, and the matter was the theme of universal discussion.

WESTFIELD, Mass., March 20.—GEORGE W. PRENTISS, accused of attempting to extort $5,000 from JAMES FISK, Jr., was yesterday committed in default of $2,000 bail to await trial in May.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March 20.—P. C. CONGDON's paper mill in West Stockbridge was burned last Thursday night. The loss is $18,000; insurance one-third that amount.

EUROPEAN CORRESPONDENCE.

SHIP-BUILDING ABROAD.

Activity on the Tyne—New Iron-Clads—Building Materials—Steam Machinery—The Work Done in Eastern Shipyards—What Americans Could Transfer Hence.

From Our Special Correspondent.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE, Wednesday, Feb. 23, 1870.

At this, my second visit to the Tyne and its vicinity, I find the ship-yards and machine shops of the district more busily employed than they were in August last, and even that their activity was startling to one who had recently visited the deserted works of New-York and London. At the present time there is close upon 100,000 tons of iron shipping under contract on the Tyne, the Wear and the Tees, and of this very large amount of tonnage about 40,000 tons are in the hands of the builders on this river. The mammoth works of the Palmer Iron and Ship-building Company at Jarrow naturally take the lead in this grand exhibition of ship-building industry. It has over 40,000 tons of steam vessels under contract, more than half of which will be completed within the next five months. The work on all the ships in the yard is being pushed ahead as rapidly as possible in order to get them off and make room for other vessels that are already contracted for. The ship and engine works are giving employment to upward of 4,000 men, exclusive of other thousands employed in the iron-works. I visited the Jarrow Works yesterday, and saw there two large iron-clads, the Swiftsure and Triumph, for the British Navy; two large steamers, the Wisconsin and Wyoming, for Messrs. WILLIAMS & GUION, New-York and Liverpool line; a large steamer for a Genoese company, to run between Genoa and Bombay via the Suez Canal; a steamer of one thousand tons for the French Transatlantic Telegraph Company; and quite a fleet of smaller steamers intended for various trades.

NEW IRON-CLADS.

The Swiftsure and Triumph are precisely alike, and are to be cruising iron-clads. They were designed by Mr. REED, Chief Constructor to the Admiralty, whose genius and skill are happily exemplified in the Monarch, acknowledged to be the most magnificent war-ship that ever floated upon American waters. The Swiftsure and Triumph will have two tiers of case-mated batteries, covering the middle section of the ship. The lower tier is to carry six guns; the upper tier four. The first will fire at broadside ranges only. The upper guns will command a much wider range, and may be trained forward or aft, nearly in a line with the keel of the ship; or they may be swung round upon their pivot carriages and fired through side ports. A broad belt of solid armor-plates six and eight inches thick, runs entirely round the ships, extending some feet below and above the water-line. Amidships the armor is carried up to protect the casemates, while forward and aft the upper works are destitute of armor. I believe that Mr. REED's theory is, that it is wise to economize the weight of his armor, and concentrate it upon the vital parts of his ship. The double casemated battery is evidently in great favor with Mr. REED for cruising iron-clads. The Audacious and Invincible, built by Messrs. MAPLES at Glasgow; the Vanguard, built by the LAIRDS at Birkenhead; the Iron Duke, building on Pembroke Dock-yard, and the Swiftsure and Triumph at Jarrow—all have the same system of armor-plating and armored casemates. There is, however, one novel feature about the Swiftsure and Triumph in which they differ from all other iron-clads. Their iron hulls, armor-belt and all, are covered with a double wood planking, which is to be sheathed with heavy copper. The object of this extra covering of wood and copper is to protect the iron bottom of the ships from fouling and enable them to keep at sea and on distant stations for three or four years without the need of docking, an operation which ordinary iron ships in service should undergo at least once in twelve months. To cut off all contact between the copper sheathing and the iron hull at the extreme ends of the ships, the stern, stem-post and rudder-posts are of gun-metal. The castings for each ship weigh about sixty tons, and are the heaviest gun-metal castings that have been made in England. The great cost of the gun-metal castings, together with the wood and copper sheathing, will no doubt make the Swiftsure and Triumph the most costly ships of their tonnage which have yet been built in this country. Their contract trial speed is fourteen knots with all their weights on board. Admirable as all of Mr. REED's ships are for the work which is expected of them, none of them are noted for beauty of form. There is a certain air of majesty about them it is true, but that is simply the expression of the tremendous power which, I think, all American visitors to the Monarch will acknowledge they possess. The high speed attained by his heaviest ships marks a wonderful success in naval architecture and engineering.

NEW OCEAN STEAMERS.

Next to the great war-ships, and in striking contrast to them, are the graceful hulls of the Wisconsin and Wyoming. A mastiff and a gray-hound coupled would aptly typify the Triumph and the Wisconsin as they now stand there side by side. The Wisconsin is to be launched early in March, the Wyoming about two months later. They are to be alike, down to the smallest detail, and are expected to combine great speed with good cargo capacity, and a moderate consumption of coal. Compared with the requirements of other very fast ocean steamers, I shall be greatly mistaken if these two ships do not elicit high praise from all in New-York who take an interest in nautical affairs; and I am quite sure that they will soon become favorite ships with American Transatlantic travelers. They are 378 feet by 41 feet on deck, which is flush and clear from end to end,—carrying in the cabins, officers' quarters, cooking arrangements, &c., and a large space forward where the steerage passengers may enjoy fresh air and exercise without exposure to the inclement weather which so often prevails upon the North Atlantic. In many of the Atlantic steamers, the steerage passengers are literally imprisoned in the stifling steerage during a heavy gale, and the effect of the close confinement of a large number of people in the limited space and foul atmosphere is sometimes very serious. The managers of the excellent German transatlantic lines were the first to improve upon the arrangement of the earlier British built steamers, by putting an extra deck upon their vessels, and their example is now being followed by the British lines, between Liverpool and New-York. The work upon the Wisconsin and Wyoming is superior to any that I have seen upon Tyne-built merchant steamers, and shows a steady improvement in the quality of the work done by the Palmer Company. The planking on the sides is flush, making a smooth side, and each plank is placed upon its edges and fitted with the nicest precision to the adjoining planks. The planking on the Wisconsin is finished and painted, and her sides look as true and smooth that one almost thinks she has been turned out of a perfect mold and painted down. Not a seam or a butt is to be seen. On the Wyoming the planking is in progress, and the style of work can be seen to advantage. I examined it very closely, and was astonished at the exact seam and nicety with which every plank was fitted and riveted. This method of planking is next to be stronger than the old method of overlapping edges; and as a band of planking runs round the ship under every seam in the outer planking, there is no doubt as accession of strength as well as of style. The two upper decks are of iron covered with wood planking; and in all their details, whether they relate to strength, finish, comfort or convenience in working ship and cargo, the vessels exhibit the result of a large and wide experience of trade requirements, and naval construction.

THE SYSTEM OF GOVERNMENT INSPECTION.

The system of inspection and supervision over the Government works is very close. Two Admiralty experts are constantly at the yard. They inspect every bit of iron and wood, every bolt and rivet, and every foot of work that goes into or upon the ship. Nothing escapes them, and no work is permitted to go on without their knowledge and approval. I am inclined to think that their strict and intelligent supervision of the labor has had a good effect upon the workmen, who have thus been educated up to a very high standard of workmanship, which they apply with the true pride of skilled artisans to all work which they undertake.

IMPROVED ENGINES.

The Wisconsin and Wyoming are to have compound engines, working at high and low pressure, with cylinders of 60 inches and 120 inches. The arrangement of the machine is different from the usual pattern in this: The smaller cylinder stands in the usual position over the crank shaft, and works vertically. The large cylinder lies upon its side. The pistons and their connections thus work at right angles to each other. The object of this arrangement is to economize space, and stow an immense and powerful machine into a moderate-sized engine-room. The crank shaft is of steel, 20 inches in diameter, connecting with a propeller 19 feet in diameter and 26 feet pitch, with four steel blades screwed upon a center boss, which is 4 feet in diameter. The boilers are enormously strong, the plates being 1¼ inches thick, and the riveting very correct and solid. I hope that experts from the naval and merchant service will visit the Wisconsin when she arrives in New-York, and carefully examine her boilers and machinery, and especially note the riveting of her very thick boiler plates. It was all done by hydraulic pressure, and I think that all will admit that it is superior to hand riveting. In fact, Mr. MAXWELL, chief of the engine department at Jarrow, told me that he had found hand work insufficient and unreliable on boiler plates exceeding an inch in thickness. The boilers are subject to a test of one hundred and fifty pounds pressure, under the Board of Trade supervision. The engines are planned to work up to 3,600 horse-power, consuming about seventy tons of coal per day, and driving the ships at a speed equal to that of the fastest steamers upon the Atlantic. Their cargo capacity will be about the same as that of the other steamers of Messrs. WILLIAMS & GUION's line. The new ships are larger than the Nevada and Idaho, but they are also finer at the ends. I have devoted a large space in this letter to the Wisconsin and the Wyoming, for the reason that they fairly represent the progress of ocean steam-ship building in this district, and it must interest the many citizens of the United States who are eager to build large ocean steamers at home, to know what improvements are going on here, and with what they will have to contend if they carry their plans into execution.

THE WATER-BALLAST PLAN.

The steamer that is building at JARROW, for the Genoa and Bombay trade, is a first-class vessel of about 3,500 tons. She is to be handsomely fitted for first-class passengers, and if the line is well managed it will no doubt be well patronized by travelers to and from India. The main reliance of the Company is, however, the cotton traffic from Bombay to Genoa, and for that trade the steamer and others that are to follow her are especially designed. They are built with double floors, for the admission of water ballast, and will be able to load entirely with cotton at Bombay, requiring no ballast other than the coal in the bunkers on leaving that port; as the coal is burned out at sea and the ship lightened, water ballast will be taken in as it is needed. The steamer will thus be kept in her best trim throughout the voyage. She will not be forced to provide ballast at the beginning of her run to protect her against disaster at the end, and she will stow more cotton and leave Bombay lighter than she could do if built upon the ordinary plan. I am strongly in favor of large steamers, built upon the water-ballast plan, for the trade of our Southern cotton ports. Most of those ports are inaccessible to vessels of deep draught, and at the same time the average freight upon cotton to European ports will not pay in steamers of small tonnage and capacity. It is, therefore, necessary to construct steamers that will carry a very large cargo of cotton upon a light draught of water, or abandon the hope of establishing a profitable steam carrying trade between the Southern ports and Europe. One step in the right direction is to dispense with the dead weight of ballast on entering and leaving port. If a steamer of this construction needs ballast upon her voyage toward the cotton port, she can get rid of it on approaching her harbor, and without interfering with any cargo she may have in, or impeiling her working powers. She can leave port with her cargo of cotton and the coals that she is likely to consume upon her voyage; and if she needs ballast before she ends her passage, she takes it in at sea, and maintains a uniform, safe and seaworthy trim. Another advantage which water-ballasted cargo steamers may possess, is economy of space occupied by machinery. With water ballast at command for trimming ship, the engines, boilers, &c., can be placed far aft, close to the stern of the ship, dispensing with the long connections of midship engines with the screw, and utilizing room which is often practically lost. The weight which would send the ship down by the stern, can be neutralized at any time by the admission of water into ballast compartments, forward of the ships center.

UNION OF THE WORLD'S COTTON PORTS.

Cheap steam transportation between the cotton ports of the United States and the cotton markets of Europe can no longer be postponed without causing injury to the cotton growers of our Southern States. India, their great competitor in cotton culture, is now within easy reach of the European markets, by steam and the Suez Canal. Already steam lines to the cotton ports of India, via the Canal, have been started in Marseilles, Genoa, Trieste and Odessa, and all those ports now are practically nearer to Bombay than they are to New-Orleans or Savannah. Liverpool, London and Havre ship-owners are also sending steamers to Bombay and Calcutta, via Suez, and orders to build steamers especially adapted to the trade have been received in England and Scotland from nearly every important seaport in Europe. The effect of this close connection between the cotton growers of India and the cotton manufacturers of Europe, cannot be favorable to the cotton-growing interests of the United States. Its threatened dangers should be promptly met by fair legislation and vigorous enterprise. The Southern States must have direct steam connections with the leading European cotton markets, and that steam connection must be profitable to those who provide the transportation, or it will not last. Vessels of moderate cost, light working expenses, large cargo capacity, and light draught, are the only class of steamers that can earn attractive profits by carrying cotton at the current freights; and such steamers American citizens are not permitted to own, as American citizens; they must ignore that proud title or retire from the business of running steamships upon the North Atlantic. The capital and steamers required for the cotton trade cannot be built in the United States without an extravagant outlay of capital, which will be sure to entail a serious loss upon any one who may attempt the enterprise. As our laws now stand our Southern fellow-citizens must patiently wait until foreign steam-ship owners take up the trade which they offer, and which Americans, their fellow-countrymen, would gladly carry on if they were permitted to do so upon conditions which offered a reasonable promise of success. The people of the South like the people of the West are dependent upon foreign ship-owners for the conveyance of their produce to European markets, and they will continue to do so despite sent, or loss to the country, so long as the rights and interests which are opposed to the repeal of the Registry law, which forbids the purchase by American citizens of ships suitable for modern trade, upon terms which will allow them to compete with the ship-owners of Great Britain, Germany, France, Spain, Italy, Austria, Russia, or Turkey. CONTINENTAL SUMMARY.

Legislative Session—The Paris Municipal Council—The Ecumenical Council—French Figures, Marguerite—The Late Mr. Buchingham.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Sunday, March 6, 1870.

There is but little news of interest to forward you today. I have never known Paris reduced to such a state of political and social stagnation as during the last week.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

The Corps Legislatif resumed its sittings this afternoon after a recess taken to afford the Ministry time to mature its measures. It is to be hoped that, now the state of unprofitable discussion has been passed, we shall see it proceed to the realization of the programme which placed it in power. It is said that the Right will at once engage in an active campaign against it, and the tone of its organs is certainly calculated to confirm that impression. I question much, however, whether the reactionists comprising that fraction of the Chamber will care to carry out their threats, seeing that the result of such a policy would certainly be to provoke a dissolution. The Government has nothing whatever to fear from another appeal to the constituencies. Not so the Arsedians. It is questionable whether a dozen of its members would be sent back to the Chamber. Besides, they know the Emperor is strongly opposed to a dissolution, and they are not likely to run counter to the Imperial wishes. If any more time, then, is wasted in fruitless discussions it will be less the fault of the Chamber than the Ministry. It has but to promptly and energetically push forward its measures to secure the continuance of the support given it on the question of the official candidatures. Any further delay or faltering in its purposes would be fatal to its existence, for it would detach from the heterogeneous majority which it commands all its more advanced members, and thus afford old Right an opportunity of carrying out the tactics by which it proposes, it is said, to overturn it.

That the Left is sincerely desirous of giving the Administration a chance of accomplishing the reforms which it contemplates, you will see from the subjoined extract from an article published in the Siècle of this morning. It shows that the vote on the official candidatures was part of a settled policy, and not an isolated act, as pretended by the extreme radical organs:

"We trust," says the Siècle, "that the Gauche, whose rôle, under these circumstances, is naturally traced, will apply itself to place the Cabinet and the Chamber in a position to satisfy the wishes of the country. From the very fact that the opposition of the Left is disengaged from all ministerial aspirations; that every one is aware that it does not seek to take the places of the existing Ministry; its action disinterested of every other motive save that of the conquest of the public liberties, will, we believe, be all the more effective. Should there be opposed to reforms an absolute rejection or dilatory expedients, public opinion, confused and uncertain though it be at present, will arrive at definite conclusions, and will find means to impose its legitimate exigencies."

PARIS MUNICIPAL COUNCIL.

The question of the manner of electing the new Municipal Council of Paris, continues to cause great embarrassment, and I am afraid that the Commission formed by the Minister of the Interior, is not likely to find a solution for the difficulty. Do you know what the Commission proposes? To have half the members elected and to reserve the other half for Government nomination. This is a compromise that will fail to give satisfaction to public sentiment. It would insure an absolute majority to the Government in the direction of municipal affairs, for from the councilors elected it would always be easy for the Ministry by honors or places for themselves or friends, to detach a sufficient number of votes to insure the passage of such measures as it might favor. Besides, the principle involved in this mode of election is utterly inconsistent with those enunciated by the Ministry on entering office. Should the Commission have decided on adopting it, it will certainly be rejected when it comes before the Chamber, although the Right will vote for it in a mass.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.

It seems to be now quite certain that in the event of the Jesuits carrying the dogma of infallibility through the Ecumenical Council France will withdraw her troops from Rome. Comte DARU's recently-published correspondence indicates this result as inevitable. The truth is that the Pope has been long preparing for it. The creation of an army of volunteers for his service was simply a preparatory measure to the imposition of the dogma on the Catholic world. Had his Holiness not been determined to force it down people's throats at the point of the sword, he would have contented himself with such military protection as France was willing to afford him. Well, we shall see how far these treatise of the Church militant will carry it. With threatened schisms in the Eastern and Western Churches, and probable expulsion from Rome by another revolution, I am afraid the poor old Pope is destined to find that, through pronounced infallible in matters of faith, he is lamentably fallible in matters of judgment. You have seen what a reception he gave the Prince D'ASTURIAS at the Vatican. The hopes of the reactionary party in the Church are set on the future of this little bastard. For him is reserved the glory of restoring the reign of the Jesuits and the Inquisition in Spain.

PRINCE PIERRE BONAPARTE.

The approaching trial of Prince PIERRE BONAPARTE at Tours is exciting strong feelings of disquietude. It is feared that his acquittal, of which few seem to entertain any doubt, will lead to fresh disturbances in Paris and others of the principal cities of France. It was a great mistake on the part of the Government not to accept the Prince's offer to renounce his privilege as a member of the Imperial family, and to be tried by an ordinary jury. His acquittal by a Court constituted like that which is about to assemble at Tours, will be set down as a defeat of justice, although I am satisfied that M. EMILE OLLIVIER believes that he is acting strictly in conformity with its interests. The story circulated about the presentation of a cartoon and an address to the Prince by a number of Americans resident in Paris, is, I find, perfectly true. One of the two gentlemen who were present when they were presented to him, (M. RAMBAUD, of the Parliament, and M. PERTUITEZ, the famous sportsman,) corroborated the fact to me. M. RAMBAUD says that he read the list of signatures, but that the Prince begged of him not to mention any of the names. But for his promise not to do so, I should have been in a position to forward them to you in order that they should not lose the glory of a proceeding without parallel for its political consistency and good taste.

THE LATE MR. BUCHINGAME.

The Buchingame commemorative meeting is to take place on the 26th, at the American Chapel in the Rue de Berry, and judging from the interest manifested in regard to it will be a most interesting affair. I mentioned in my last that all the representatives of foreign Courts, and the principal public functionaries would be invited attend.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

HYGIENE OF THE VOICE. By CHELIUS DURANT, M. D., Ph. D. New-York: SCRIBNER. 1870.

This monograph supplies a want that has long existed, and which, as more time, money and interest are bestowed on the art of singing, is proportionably more felt. It is true that the best teachers are possessed of a body of rules derived from experience and tradition, the observance of which would be of great advantage to the singer; but most people have become intractable of accepting oral tradition, and precepts uttered in broken English by a man who has no time to explain the reasonings on which they are founded make little impression. Let us hope that the same precepts, conveyed in unexceptionable language, presented to the eye in print, with all the anatomical and scientific reasonings on which they are founded, compressed into the fewest possible words, and set forth with that perfect lucidity which is the almost exclusive possession of the French scientist, may be more efficacious.

In one thin and elegant volume, easily mastered in half a day, Dr. DURANT makes the student acquainted with the latest results of scientific investigation, and its bearing on three hundred years of empirical practice in the training and management of the human voice; and sets before him at one view the rules derived from the experience of the wisest Continental masters, and the medical reasons which sanction those rules, in a manner to interest, to warn, and to enlighten even the most heedless of those who consult him. Dr. DURANT's description of the anatomy of the larynx and vocal apparatus is clearness itself, and can scarcely fail to fix in the mind the lesson he intends it to convey, viz.: that a mechanism so delicate should not be subjected to the careless usage so frequently indulged in, or the violent efforts the public sometimes so barbarously applaud. His explanation of the causes of differing timbre or quality of tones is new to us, and highly ingenious; so also his account of the formation of the voice, of its growth, and the changes to which it is liable.

But it is the advice, the instruction, the caution, which as a physician Dr. DURANT offers in language quite dispassionate and quite irrefutable, that we should like to see in the hands of every teacher, every parent and every young singer in the country. We so constantly tremble for the voices of public singers, and so often have to mourn over the loss of an organ which has contributed to the delight of a private circle, that it would be well indeed if the young generation would accept a guide who can teach them to avoid the pitfalls into which so many have stumbled.

It is not easy to make extracts epitomizing a work which is itself a marvel of compression, but the following may be interesting even to the general reader.

"Between light and sound the analogy has oftenbeen made, and this in all ages has given birth to thousands of conjectures between musical tones and colors—between music and painting. That this analogy exists is indisputable, but we must be on our guard lest we carry it further than the nature of the case will allow. It is true that it may serve as a source of metaphors, but we must not claim for it any scientific value whatever. If, since the varying rapidity of vibration produces the different colors as well as tones, in considering the resemblance between music and painting, we should find that the number of vibrations corresponding to the red of the chromatic scale the same relation to the number corresponding to C of the acoustic scale as that for the orange does to that for D, or that for the yellow does to that for E, or even that the proportion should hold good throughout both the chromatic and acoustic gamuts; nevertheless, we should not be justified in insisting on this resemblance, that a complete identity had been established, nor the imagining that a harpsichord of colors might be constructed on which we would be able to play tunes with the eyes."

(The italics are ours.) Again:

"From these considerations and the preceding paragraph, we see that if the tube may be made to yield tones of any depth by prolonging it, the embouchure being the same, it must be considered as a flute; but if it can be lowered only an octave, or less, with the same embouchure, it must be classed as a reed; the latter is the case with the larynx.

We now see what is the true character of the vocal apparatus, that the sound is the result of the vibrations of the vocal ligaments, and that these vibrate in the same manner as the reed in any musical instrument, and that the pitch is chiefly governed by the tension of the vocal chords. As yet we know little concerning the mode in which tones are modified by the air passages both above and below the larynx, but that they are modified there cannot be a doubt, if we observe the great amount of muscular contraction taking place during singing or speech.

The production of a note presupposes two indispensable conditions: first, a body capable of vibrating; second, an agent competent to produce the vibrations.

The first condition we have seen fulfilled in the larynx, which contains the chords vocales. The second, in accordance with that beautiful provision of nature that nothing shall be useless, we find in the air introduced in the lungs, and which, having undergone change, has therefore become a waste product."

The following is interesting to those whose children are intrusted to hands too often incompetent, in Sunday and other schools, and in boy choirs:

"It is also of the greatest importance that young people should not be allowed to sing pieces not completely within the range of their voice, nor strive to reach certain notes by too great or too prolonged efforts, lest they should lose whatever disposition they may have for singing. If the attempt to execute certain musical passages can alter, or even destroy, voices already formed, would they not, if they did no worse, prevent the development of vocal organs yet young and delicate?"

In his very instructive chapter on alimentation, Dr. DURANT quotes as follows from M. SEGOND:

"There is among singers a prejudice concerning alimentation. A great many of them expect to find in a frugal diet a sure guarantee against the alterations of the voice; but when the singer perceives that in breathing he loses his own substance, and that the reparation is made by alimentation only, he will understand that breathing much more than the man who does not sing, he must repair his enormous losses by a diet of the most nutritious character. Then, and then only, living in a perfect equilibrium he will preserve his voice in its strength and compass, and no longer be exposed to the numerous and severe disorders of the vocal apparatus which develop themselves so quickly in an exhausted organism."

Dr. DURANT's work closes with a chapter on the hygiene of the voice, which we should be glad, did space allow, to reprint bodily. Not that the arguments against tight lacing, tight collars, sudden exposure to cold, and so forth, are new, but they are admirably stated, and the penalties of transgression clearly revealed. Persons of a highly nervous organization may take a hint from the following:

"The best way to overcome the influence of sudden emotions, is to cultivate the habit of breathing easily, tranquilly, and by small inspirations. In this way the respiratory muscles and the lungs, being accustomed to a certain rhythm of movement, keep it notwithstanding every nervous shock; when the system may sustain, even the acceleration of the circulation which is an ordinary effect of emotion, seem made in a methodical inspiration an obstacle to which it must yield. Regulated by the breathing, function after function returns to its natural condition; the heart ceases to palpitate, the brain becomes clear and the voice, docile to the incontrary if any disorder of the breathing be added to the effect produced by emotion upon the cerebral system, it becomes impossible to control the action of the voluntary muscles."

NEW MAGAZINES.

—The April Appleton's gives the usual installment of Mr. TROLLOPE's "Year of Jubilee," and thereafter a paper on "The Negro in the South," from Mr. E. A. POLLARD. So far as the facts of Mr. POLLARD's article go, we are glad to receive them. But we cannot help thinking that his conversion has been sudden and that his prompt use of the controversial weapons so lately employed against those with whom he has been politically identified, smacks of bad taste. The negro will do better than his foes have believed possible; but it is well not to expect too much of him. His new-gained freedom has elevated him as if by magic and he has nobly shown his appreciation of the new position and duties it entails. How he will act when the idea of liberty has grown common and coarse to stimulate his energies and inflame his imagination, and when a long, steady pull in the way of voluntary labor is expected of him, remains to be seen. We hope all good things of our American blacks; but it would be foolish not to remember that elsewhere the same experiment has failed. Our future experience may be exceptional in this as in so many other things, and for the sake of the negro race, let us pray that it may be so. But let us not depend too much on what certainly includes elements of uncertainty. There are some clever bits of fiction in the present Lippincott's. Among the ladies, Mrs. DAVIS, GRACE GREENWOOD and Mrs. STOCKTON appear to advantage. Mr. PIATT shows quite at home in his essay "About Hogs," and handles it con amore. There are other papers readable enough, but none that calls for particular comment, unless it be a financial article which points out as the true solution of the national financial problem the issue of compound interest notes.

—Hours at Home is at its usual mark. There are seventeen contributions, and the names of NOAH PORTER, E. H. STODDARD, SCHELE DE VERE, Dr. HOLLAND and R. F. DE COSTA are among the contributors. "Is the Mystery Solved?" is another addition to the speculations about the Man with the Iron Mask. Mr. W. C. WILKINSON proves to his own satisfaction that Mr. LOWELL's poem, "The Cathedral," is "a decisive and even a signal failure." Dr. PORTER's "Books and Reading" are always interesting and suggestive, and Mr. DE COSTA's "Great Pyramid" pertains to a class of subjects in which the writer has been successful before. "How I Became a Scout" is a clever sketch in its way, and the chapters of Mrs. CRAIK's "Hero" will be found, by those who can abide novels in serial shape, quite attractive. While there may be nothing of very striking merit in the April Hours at Home, it contains little, on the other hand, to detract from the well-earned position of this excellent family magazine.

DOWN WITH THE TAXES.

Another Call for Immediate Reduction—It is the Demand of the People, and Not of a Party.

From the Chicago Tribune, March 11.

There has been one bill introduced in Congress during the present session to increase taxes, to wit, Gen. SCHENCK's Tariff bill. No bill has been introduced as yet to reduce taxes, though we understand that one is being matured for that purpose. The President, in his annual Message, recommended that there be no reduction; but it is reported and generally believed that he has since changed his views. The Secretary of the Treasury, in his annual report, and in a subsequent lecture in the city of Boston, took ground against any abatement, and has given no indication of any change of views. It is evident, therefore, that if any relief is to be obtained, it will not be accomplished without resistance. The people must take hold of the matter themselves, and instruct their Representatives in Congress in a way that they cannot misunderstand.

In 1867 Congress removed taxes to the amount of $77,000,000. While the large portion of this tax was, under the operation of the Tariff laws, merely diverted from the Treasury to the pockets of capitalists, there was, nevertheless, a perceptible lightening of the public burden. The internal taxes on a protected article having been all, or nearly all, removed by the legislation of 1867, it follows that any further reduction will operate to the advantage of the whole community. The tax on sales ought to be abolished. The petty and vexatious assessments on watches and silver spoons ought to be discontinued. The tax on gross receipts of transportation companies, in fact, a tax on all articles transported, and, being no longer needed, should be abolished. The special taxes or licenses should likewise be swept from the statute-book. They cost more than they come to.

In the matter of the tariff, the oppressive tax is not so much the sum which is collected by the Government as that which is forced out of the consumer for the benefit of the producer under the cover of law. The extent of this extortion is shown by the fact that there are 2,000 different articles taxed by the tariff, and that upon five of them alone the Government collects one half the revenue it receives. It has been demonstrated by the actual returns of last year's imports that $150,000,000 can be annually collected by customs duties, without any increase of the rate of tax, from sixty-five articles, thus relieving the people of the immense tax of forty-eight per cent. in gold upon all the other articles in the list.

The fact cannot be ignored that the present taxation is extremely oppressive; that it is consuming the substance of the many to enrich the few; that it is unduly and unjustly concentrating in the hands of a limited number the capital and earnings of the whole people; and, we demand for a reduction of taxes there is no party division. As long as heavy imposts and excises were needed, the people submitted without a murmur, but now that it has become a matter of dispute what is to be done with the surplus revenues, there comes up from every section of the country an emphatic demand that every unnecessary tax be abated, and that there shall be no taxation except for revenue for the Government.

Every Republican paper of note or influence in the country, with perhaps one exception, has given expression to the universal sentiment of the people that there should be an immediate reduction of taxes; not a reduction or removal of one tax, but a general relief, which shall include in its scope those taxes which are not levied for purposes of revenue. The Government has no moral right to impose a tax, except to raise money for its own requirements. Any tax beyond that is an abuse of power, and is, to all intents and purposes, an act of robbery.

It is a matter for congratulation that in all parts of the country the people are meeting, in villages, towns, counties and cities, and giving expression to the universal demand for a reduction of taxes. The Reconstruction State Convention in Indiana show a earnestly pressed this demand. Appeals are being forwarded by every mail to their representatives asking for this relief, in these appeals Republicans and Democrats unite, for they are alike interested, and it will be a serious mistake if the Republican members from Congress will have to make with their constituents this Fall if they neglect or overlook these just demands.

Indian Depredations in Texas—Sufferings of the Settlers.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, March 11.

We learn from a friend, who resides about eight miles from Denton, Texas, and who has recently arrived in this city, that a most deplorable condition of affairs exists in his section of the country. The people there live in momentary dread of the Indians, (Comanches,) who frequently make raids in force, and succeed not only in driving off large numbers of horses, but in capturing women and children. These they keep until redeemed by their friends at heavy ransoms.

The raids are usually made during the light moon, the Indians coming as from the reservation in forces varying from one hundred to three hundred. They come in on the prairie, hiding during the day in the bottoms, lying in gullies and in the small skirts of timber which are found on the creek. Arriving near a settlement, they reconnoitre stealthily until they find where they can make a dash to best advantage. Then, dismounting, they further attempt at maintaining secrecy as to their movements, they dash into towns in open day, capturing horses and shooting those citizens who may be in their way. Collecting as many horses as they can find, they start at once back to the reservation with their booty, robbing and shooting as they go. The settlements are so widely separated shot,) painted as Indians and restored by the artist. The Government has taken no steps against the part of the Indians, who utterly ignore their treaties, relying upon their own strength and their perfect knowledge of the country. Since the Government has proved itself powerless or unwilling to give the people on the border that protection to which they are entitled, it is but just that the citizens should be permitted to protect themselves by the formation of military companies. With arms and supplies, the inhabitants could and would operate with the troops against the savages successfully. Some intermediate action, either by the Government or the citizens, must be speedily taken. The Indians must be soundly thrashed, and taught to respect the rights of the whites and the power of the Government. Unless something be done to stop the work of murder and rapine, nine-tenths of the emigration to Texas will stop west of the Cross Timbers, and the fertile country west of that point be left as unoccupied as now.

OUR STATE CANALS.

A Free Canal Policy for 1870 Advocated—Old and New Policy Contrasted—A Free, National Highway from New-York to the Mississippi—Mr. Hatch's Funding Scheme Explained.

The commercial organization recently formed to promote the improvement of the State Canals, and the adoption by the Legislature of a broad and statesmanlike policy with regard to them, is about to republish an elaborate speech delivered by Hon. I. T. HATCH upon the subject. From this document we copy portions which, in some degree, indicate the reasoning of Mr. HATCH and the scope of the policy of which he is an advocate.

NECESSITY OF ACTION.

Conventions year after year have passed resolutions in favor of reduction of tolls and a speedier and cheaper transportation. We suppose now to take them at their word, and to inaugurate the policy of making the canals free. If the Constitution leaves the matter in doubt, we will take the doubt in our favor. The canal has been neglected so egregiously, mismanaged, under the prevailing notion of making repairs imperfectly when they are made, and frequently of evoking them when they ought to be made, that it has gradually become more shallow from the caving in of the bench walls; and State Engineer RICHMOND declared in his final report to the State of New-York, in his last annual report, that "there is less capacity now than there was in 1846, and double the business to perform." But Mr. HATCH agreed with other speakers that the removal of the tolls is as important as the removal of the mud. The removal of the mud only permits boats to proceed; the removal of the tolls will effectually induce them to do it, while high tolls will in the end entirely repel it. Therefore no canal policy can be practical or statesmanlike which does not include the removal of both obstructions.

By the neglect of the great thoroughfare, the commerce of the West is being excelled from this State. An immense portion of the grain trade has already taken place. Of the grain received at the ports of the lakes carried to the East in 1869, nearly 40,000,000 bushels were sent to other places than the commercial Metropolis. It is estimated that the productions of the West immensely exceed those of ten years ago, but within that period there has been a decline in the business of the canals. By a simple and famous policy a large share of the trade that naturally would come through our own State is driven into the hands of active foreign competitors, who are on the alert to receive it. The receipts of wheat and flour at Montreal alone last year were 14,000,000 bushels, and the Canadians are taking advantage of the situation and has expended since the union of the upper and lower provinces upon the Welland canal, of the St. Lawrence nearly $6,000,000; and we are now threatened with extensive improvements in connection with which the Welland made its opening, and are left in no doubt as to their object. The new country is rapidly becoming a network of railroads, and some of them drain and cut off the grain trade on its way to the East without permitting it to touch Chicago. And southward, too, we find that active exertions have been made to turn the course of the grain trade down the Mississippi; and unless we cheapen the cost of transportation, many of the streams of trade which have made this State and metropolis what it is, inevitably and they are will be tapped and turned away from us.

Mr. HATCH stated that a plan was proposed to fund the debt for a period of eighteen years. It was approved and recommended by the Produce Exchange and Chamber of Commerce, and brought by chance to his notice before the State Legislature, where, although not presented until the session had almost closed, it came very near adoption. At that time Senator Rockefeller, his lawyer and early friend, approved. The chief provisions of the plan were: No power to be conferred upon the Canal Board to lease or to conclude the Canals; no power to sell the Canals; no power to mortgage the Canals; no power to borrow money; no power to create a debt; no power to pledge the revenues of the Canals; no power to create a debt without the consent of the people; no power to create a debt without provision for its payment; no power to create a debt without provision for its payment at a specified time; no power to create a debt without provision for its payment at a specified time, and that a sinking fund be created for its payment; no power to create a debt without provision for its payment at a specified time, and that a sinking fund be created for its payment, and that the money be applied to the payment of the debt and to the payment of the interest on the debt; no power to contract a debt except for the purpose of repairing the Canals; no power to contract a debt except for the purpose of repairing the Canals, and that the money be applied to the payment of the debt and to the payment of the interest on the debt; no power to contract a debt except for the purpose of repairing the Canals, and that the money be applied to the payment of the debt and to the payment of the interest on the debt, and that the money be applied to the payment of the debt and to the payment of the interest on the debt, and that the money be applied to the payment of the debt and to the payment of the interest on the debt

THE ICE QUESTION.

Contrary to the usual order at this date of the year, the navigators of the Hudson have thought from day to day that they could see the end of their work, and have accordingly spared no pains to the utmost. On Saturday the popular Miller, of the Poughkeepsie line, started with her pier in this City, determined, if it was within the range of possibilities, to make her way through to the upper end. Her experienced crew were with her, and the pier was well and strongly built. At Fort Washington the ice was reached and began to be troublesome. After some hard pushing it was found impossible, and the only way in which she could proceed was to force forward with a full head of steam, and then reversing and backing the ice; then receding and heaving up again in a fresh course. Although the surface of the river was covered with a thick layer of ice, with light furrows of fragments, still when the whole force, weight and momentum of the vessel was launched against it, the obstacle was yielded, and it burst in pieces great masses or boulders of the ice-wall laid down by the work of the week out of sight. At length the boat, with most frantic efforts, was driven in, and wedged so firm and tight that she could not move, nor could the United even yet back. Helpful sloops came from Poughkeepsie and the Miller, which connected to tow down the River to Fishkill, Newburgh and Cornwall, her destination. Her passage through dislodged the ice, which connected to float down the River into Haverstraw Bay, where the Miller could pass through and make her free between the ice and the capital. She was planked forward with two tiers, and placed with some iron, which was scarcely a dent or scratch, although she was hammered and punched through from eight to twelve inches of her prow. Her forward hold, deep, side-wheel steamers that would have attempted this feat, and escaped being crushed like an egg shell or cut through and sunk. The propellers R. L. Hartrouck and City of Newburgh were the finest vessels of the ice-boats, and behaved admirably. All the steamers except the Connecticut, together with the Newburgh barges and the Newark boats, are running regularly. Capt. DEMING declares that he could pilot the Connecticut through to Troy to-day, and that the line will be operated regularly to Albany. The ice, between Poughkeepsie, toward Albany, is firm and solid, except in open spots or spots cut and kept open for business purposes. Below Poughkeepsie there is scarcely a handful of ice to be seen.

The ice varies in thickness at different points from six to twelve inches, but nowhere in the River is it more than seven inches, and generally less than five. The thermometer, rain and wind storm, on Wednesday morning, for a time threatened a sudden breaking up and extensive freshet, but that did not occur, and the weakness of the ice caused by it was nearly counterbalanced by the strength of its subsequent solidification. Yesterday the River, there were fresh signs of weakness. The Mohawk, the Hoosick and other tributaries, broke and cracked with the premonitory sounds of dissolution. Except in places such as Crotonville, and a short bends, where there are high walls, which ice is forced into narrow spaces, more moderate days, with tempering sun, with rain, fogs, fresh winds and down water from the snow-covered hills, swell the rivers, cause a freshet and a complete clearing out of the ice from all the Hudson. The ice-men have been using every opportunity, night and day, to make hay (ice) while the sun shines. Every Kind of Land, Water, of men and teams, the farmers and every available hand has been used. No rest has been allowed on Sundays, and at night by the glare of calcium lights and kerosene bonfires, they have worked unceasingly. Their operations have extended to a stoppage of a number of tons that they have cut and housed, and appear anxious that no over-estimate shall be made by prying reporters. Whether this course is a part of the strategy of monopoly, the public can decide without help. But from the careful estimate of shrewd observers, it is certain that the monopolists have a very large supply either housed or stacked, ready to be packed within forty-eight hours. In addition to the quantity stored at the large Companies' houses along the river, a very large quantity than usual—amount has been gathered and packed by parties who have a big eye to speculation, and it is safe to say that there will be a great supply in the market at low prices. The following figures, representing the number of tons ice stored at various places, may be relied upon, all the stories of the monopolists may say to the contrary notwithstanding: Rockland, 20,000; Cornwallville, 25,000; New Baltimore, 25,000; Hudson and Stockport, 30,000; Athens, 30,000; Brandon's Bay, 16,000; Catskill, 15,000; Germantown, 40,000; Saugerties and Tivoli, 5,000; Rhinebeck, 20,000; Barrytown, 15,000; Rhinebeck and Shokokon, 20,000; Poughkeepsie, 20,000; between Milton and Low Point, 15,000; Newburgh, 10,000; Roshook, 10,000; Peekskill, 7,000; West Point, 5,000; Garrison's, 2,000; Fishkill, 9,000; Rockland Lake, 10,000. Thousands of tons in addition have been sent up and down the Hudson River Railroad, Harlem and other lines of the lakes, rivers and ponds at inland points have been thoroughly packed of unusually thick and clear fine ice, and barns, cellars and cranberries have been extemporized into cares for the retention of the glittering, frosty, speculative treasure until the measure is full, abundant and running over.

St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church—Tribute to the Memory of the Late Mr. W. W. Cornell.

The pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, corner of Fourth-avenue and Twenty-second-street, discoursed yesterday on the subject of the uncertainty of the hour of death, selecting for his text the words, "Boast not thyself of to-morrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth"—Proverbs, chapter xxvii. 1st verse. The reverend gentleman remarked that this admonition of the Holy Scriptures against boasting with reference to our future life was enjoined on us to counteract its influence which tended to destroy our dependence on God, and to remind us of the frailty of our own nature. Man was the creature of circumstances. He was not followed with a single stability upon which he could rely for preservation from one day to the next. His life was a vapor; it was at the mercy of a thousand daily casualties which beset his path, any one of which might send him unprepared into the presence of his Creator. The most matured plans are at best frail, liable to be overthrown, and a single unloosed bolt, a slight indication of an unpropitious storm, or any of the never-ending changes and misfortunes of life, may at one blow hurl him from station and frustrate the hopes and efforts of a life-time. History presented an unbroken record in support of this assertion. No one could foretell the results of to-morrow, and nations as well as individuals have frequently been made conscious of its truth and of the power and inexplicable designs of God. Their own beloved church had recently suffered from heavy privations in the death of two of its most honored members. When but a few days ago the shaft of death struck that noble-minded man, whom they all revered and loved, Dr. McCLINTOCK, he saw the force of that passage of Scripture. "Boast not thyself of to-morrow, and now when again the bolt had fallen upon another beloved member of Methodism; when he saw WILLIAM W. CORNELL laid low in the dust, cut off in the midst of life, at the height of usefulness; when his name was on every lip and the synonyme of every thing manly and noble, he was again reminded "boast not thyself of to-morrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth." Many men had great plans. Both of these were working assiduously for the good of mankind, but they were gone, and their lives were like the unfinished marble monument, an evidence of what they would do if God spared them longer. They should be ready for the dread to-morrow. They should familiarize themselves with death, and though the thought was a terror in Rash now, when the final moment of dissolution arrived they would meet it without fear, but as a friend who brought them to their everlasting home beyond the grave.

War Between the Dry Goods Houses.

It is said that the houses of A. T. STEWART & Co. and H. B. CLAFLIN & Co. are engaged in an interneine warfare. STEWART, we are told, is making a terrible raid on unbleached muslins and Merrimac prints. The story goes that during the earlier part of the late war STEWART got badly frightened about muslins and put all his stock on the market, asking them for what they would fetch. CLAFLIN pretended to do the same, but in reality bought back all his own goods and bought up all STEWART's. The result was that he got a monopoly of the article, and when STEWART had to buy from CLAFLIN at pretty much what the latter chose to ask. STEWART has never forgiven CLAFLIN for this, but has been handling his forces ever since waiting patiently for an opportunity to make a raid on CLAFLIN in return. This he apparently thinks he has found, and is accordingly pushing his columns of muslin and Merrimac forward to the attack. As a central attack is caused his Merrimacs at ten cents a yard, when they were sold by the manufacturers at twelve and ninetyeight. The result is a private mark on the goods that the Merrimac then struck him from their books, and refused to sell him any more goods. STEWART is reported to have immediately produced a supply through a distinguished Philadelphia firm. Through their abundant wealth however, the Merrimac people had rolled up a private mark on the goods sold by them to this firm. Their business bought some of the goods from STEWART,

DARING ACTS OF OUTLAWS

Mr. SAMUEL BRAHAM, an attache of the Fifth-street, was in the act of closing his counting-room at No. 8 Fourth-street, when three men, who had come to him entered the place, and one of them made a small purchase, which he required the clerk to be immediately sent to Mr. Wood's store, and to send Superintendent Kelly, the clerk, and Mr. BRAHAM into the store with the customer. Mr. BRAHAM made such strong remonstrance and called so loudly for help that the daring freebooters became alarmed and fled before they had accomplished the robbery. He was able to give an accurate description of the assailants, when receiving his attention, and the Twenty-eighth Precinct Station-house and Chief McDonnell immediately sent his detectives in search of them. As yet, however, no arrest has been made.

GEORGE HALLOCK, of No. 81 West Fifty-fourth-street, was leaving through Tenth-avenue on a late hour of Saturday night, and when near Twenty-fifth-street was suddenly attacked by a gang of ruffians, who knocked him down and robbed him of his watch and chain. He notified the Police immediately, but could not give a description of the assailants, who had fled immediately after the commission of the outrage.

Mr. WILLIAM HARVEY, one of the editors of the Brooklyn Union, while passing through Varick-street, Saturday night, had his pocket picked of his watch and chain. The latter was recently found in a pawn-shop. The thief, HENRY PIERCE, who was arrested, arraigned before Justice DOWLING yesterday morning, and committed for trial. As Mr. HARVEY seemed to the Magistrate to be unwilling to appear against the thief, he was required to be bound in the sum of $500 to appear and prosecute.

At an early hour yesterday morning JOHN HOGAN, of English No. 97, being upon watch duty, discovered a fire in the basement of No. 190 West Broadway, and immediately gave the alarm to his comrades, located in Franklin-street, which was soon extinguished by the aid of the Police. Upon entering the basement Foreman Yates found a large fire burning in the wooden floor, which would in a few minutes have jeopardized the entire building. Strangely enough, two men who were in the apartment made no attempt whatever to extinguish the fire, and when being questioned, evidently admitted that they had kindled the fire for the purpose of warming themselves. They gave their names as JOHN HAYS and JAMES LYONS, both claiming to reside at No. 45 Sullivan-street, the former being employed by Consulting Engineer, machine-tool maker, on Cortlandt-street, and the latter by a gang of ruffians who had kindled the fire. Being arraigned yesterday before Justice DOWLING, they were committed for examination on a charge of arson, although they declared they had no intention of firing the building, which is six stories in height, containing a large amount of valuable property, and that they would have been placed in extreme peril but for the timely discovery of their act of insane carelessness.

The Century Club and the Late Gulian C. Verplanck.

At a meeting of the Board of Management of the Century Club Saturday evening, the following resolutions, proposed by Mr. W. E. CURTIS, were adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased Providence to remove from this Club our deceased friend and associate, GULIAN C. VERPLANCK, therefore,

Resolved, That the Century recognize that while in his death this community loses one of its most honored members, we, who are one of its most loving and persevering friends, society can ill do spare examples of the cultivated scholar and the Christian gentleman which he called upon us to pass with one accord to us by half years of intimate association, has bowed us to, from our organization, the resolution of father, founder and friend.

Resolved, That the Club will attend the funeral at Trinity Church, on Monday next, at 1 P. M.

Resolved, That the resolutions be printed in the morning papers, and that the Secretary transmit a copy to the family of the deceased.

Court of Special Sessions—The Reorganization.

On Friday, Feb. 25, this Court was reorganized by an act of the present Legislature, and is now held by three Justices instead of two as heretofore. Since the first of the present month Justices HOGAN, SCOTT and MOQUADE have been in attendance, the former acting as presiding Justice. The Court opened at 10 A. M., instead of 9, as formerly, which is a more convenient hour for witnesses living at a distance, as parties on many occasions have to come from the neighboring cities. The calendar thus far has averaged about thirty cases each session. Great care and attention has been bestowed upon the examination of cases, and although it renders the sessions longer than formerly, you appears to give general satisfaction. The Clerk, Mr. JOHN HOUGHTALING, and his assistant, Mr. JOHN N. LEDYARD, have been fully initiated into the duties of their offices, and everything works regularly, with but one or two exceptions the attaches have been changed, and it is understood that no other changes will be made, as the Justices have expressed themselves fully satisfied with those they have at present.

UNITED STATES COURT—EASTERN DISTRICT.

Before Judge Benedict.

A petition has been filed by James Howell, Jr., asking that George D. Hooper, of the City of Brooklyn, should be declared a bankrupt. Said Hooper is alleged to be a preferred 16 Kilbing, and to have committed an act of bankruptcy by surrendering himself in order to avoid service of legal process for the recovery of debt. Hooper has been allowed till Saturday next to show cause why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT—BROOKLYN.

Before Judge Talbot.

George H. Snyder vs. Reuben W. Hoxsie and Gabriel A. Mary.—This suit, as already noted, was brought to recover the sum of $1,000, being the amount of plaintiff's balance at his banker, Messrs. Hoxsie & Mary, the defendants. Payment was refused on the ground that the money had been paid out prior to the 20th of December, 1869, on the day on which plaintiff presented the check which was received subsequently to that date. Plaintiff alleged that the check on which his balance had been paid was forged, and other witnesses for the defendants took the same view of the matter. Yesterday morning they came into Court with a sealed verdict, awarding the plaintiff the full amount claimed, $1,000 and costs.

For plaintiff, Gen. Crooke; for defendants, Gen. Barlow.

MONDAY, March 21—A. M.

The Trade of the past week was less favorable than expected in the direct clearances of Domestic Produce from this port to Foreign markets, and the business in Foreign merchandise shows some falling off from the corresponding season of 1869. The decrease of Goods marketed since the 1st of March is about two and a quarter millions, and the falling off in Customs, (taking the same number of business days,) about one million.

[illegible]

The Gold Market was steadier than on Friday by ¼@¾ ⅌ cent. The extreme range was [illegible] ⅌ cent. A corresponding advance preceded in the Foreign Exchange, which the leading bankers put up to 109¼@109½ ⅌ cent. for 60 days, 110¼@110½ ⅌ cent. for sight. The Foreign Funds were also firmer than on Friday, though the rise was scarcely ¼@¼ ⅌ cent. The Bank return of the week reflects a temporarily easier and easy condition, and the Money Market doubtless will act to the Stock Brokers, on call, at ⅌ cent. to the Bill Brokers and at Bank on first-class Merchant paper of short dates. The Banks have increased their Loans since the previous return [illegible]. They lose $1,284,[illegible] on Bank Gold and $627,[illegible] on their Greenback average. The general line of Deposits is down $1,614,[illegible] and Circulation lower by $136,[illegible]. The Sub-Treasury received during the week for Gold Customs $[illegible], and paid out Gold interest on the Public Debt of $[illegible]. At the Stock Exchange the Southern State Bonds were firm on Virginia and Tennessee, and in the Railway market there was a recovery of ½@1 ⅌ cent., and in some instances 1¼ ⅌ cent. on the lowest sales of Friday. In the Afternoon the New-York Central Stock and Scrip were sold Ex-Dividend of 4 ⅌ cent.

After the late Boards the following quotations were made as compared with Friday night:

The 5-20s of 1867 fell off ⅛ at the close of the day.

Reported Officially.

At the late session of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad directors, the proposals for construction on the unfinished part of the line, we are informed, were opened, and contracts were made with the lowest responsible bidders for a large portion of the work at prices which are deemed very satisfactory by the Company. Nearly 3,000 men will shortly be at work on the road, and probably 75 miles of the line, now partially graded, will be opened this year. The affairs of the road are in a good shape for energetic action, as the floating debt, of nearly one million, has been paid off within the past year, and in addition Virginia bonds have been purchased sufficient to cancel the interest of the State in the Blue Ridge Tunnel. The 1 ⅌ cent. loan secured to Messrs. Fisk & HATCH is also being rapidly taken up, so that there is every prospect of an early completion of the road through from tide-water to the Ohio River.

GENERAL.

At a recent interview between the Venezuelan Acting President, Gen. MONAGAS, and the ambassadors of the nations whose citizens are creditors of that Republic, representations were made that the suspension of the payment of the fifteen per cent. agreed upon by the mixed commission would enable the Government to suppress the revolts that were daily occurring. The representatives would not consent to the cessation of the payments, and were then told that the first duty of the State was to preserve its own integrity.

Our Foothold in the West Indies.

The San Domingo treaty is the special order in the Senate for Wednesday next. In the Committee the vote was well-nigh balanced, the opponents of the protocol at last securing a bare majority. The probability now is that this bare majority will also prove a barren one when the question is brought before the full Senate.

Regarded as a mere acquisition of territory, San Domingo can bring nothing to us which we actually need; and we have always regretted, as indeed we have frequently ridiculed, the attempts to attractively set forth, as its chief feature, the enormous "gold fields" of the island we may soon possess. The true value—and a measureless one it is—of San Domingo, is of an entirely different sort. This value consists, first, in its splendid position as a naval depot, repair-shop and coaling station for the Caribbean Sea; and second, as the key-point to the Darien Canal.

The best argument for San Domingo is to be found in the map of the Western Hemisphere; and it confronts us most convincingly when the commercial problem of the Gulf and the Isthmus comes up for solution. The Darien canal is the engineering task of the near future; and it is idle to talk of our reaping the full advantage of this marvelous enterprise without a Gulf port near at hand. San Domingo lies centrally in the gateway of the trade of nations across the Isthmus. Competing favorably with Cuba in its extent of territory and in geographical site, the second in size of all the insular States of the Gulf, located midway between the Bahamas and the Caribbee Isles, lying directly across the path to Panama, to which a route is open on either extremity of the island,—surely the very position of the island offers the best logic for its acquisition, while its relations to the trans-isthmian problem are intimate and striking.

The whole island will unquestionably become the property of the United States if the present treaty be ratified, nearly four-fifths of it being secured at one stroke, and the western segment, now comprising the Republic of Hayti, gravitating to us, in due time, of necessity. It is the most beautiful and one of the richest of the West Indian Islands. San Domingo proper, contains about 18,000 square miles. On its northern shore, COLUMBUS founded the first Spanish colony in the New World, and from that day to this the island has been famous, not less for its healthfulness than for its marvelous mineral resources. Its woods, too, are a mine of wealth, comprising as they do mahogany, oak, satin-wood, lignum-vitæ, and the most expensive cabinet material, while its staples of coffee, sugar, indigo, cocoa, tobacco and so on, are household words with our people, even though they may have attached thereto little thought of the precise locality of their origin.

But, as we have said, we are not to discuss the question of the mineral riches of the island, so famous three centuries ago, nor its agricultural fertility, almost matchless on the globe, nor its climate, nor its adaptability to a form of government like our own. What we are to note is that it has a magnificent harbor for our purposes in the bay and peninsula of Samana. This is what we have been aiming at for more than twenty years in the West Indies—under POLK, FILLMORE, PIERCE, BUCHANAN, LINCOLN, JOHNSON, and now under GRANT. In the days of sailing fleets we needed it, and in peace times we were willing to pay for it a reasonable price. But war taught us the vast national advantages of such a station, and the era of steam has warned us to wait for it no longer. Great Britain, France, Spain, nay, even Denmark have their West Indian stations, but we, who are most interested there, have none.

The Perry-Gautier treaty proposes that we shall acquire this vast property for $1,500,000 in gold. When more liberal terms were first offered to Hayti they were refused. But the hard fate of the island in later years, and the desire of the people to get at once the advantages of a powerful government with an infusion of new energy for the development of the island's resources, have changed their views. The price can hardly be considered more than a nominal one, and the consent of the Dominicans to annexation has been freely and heartily accorded.

We have long been convinced that the acquisition of a West Indian port was of prime importance to the naval and commercial interests of the country. Had we possessed San Domingo during the war, we believe it would have paid for itself in its influence on the shortening of the war. But now, with our new commercial position at stake, and with the Darien Canal a necessity, we cannot doubt that the Senate will see the pressing importance of the new acquisition. If the bargain has been straightforward and above-board, and if the price be not exorbitant, let the Senate act decisively.

Sources of Political Corruption.

The scene which transpired in the Assembly Chamber, at Albany, on Friday, suggests food for serious reflection. The charges made by Mr. THOMAS C. FIELDS, of this City, against Mr. ARMSWORTH, of Saratoga, following closely after the revelations of Congressional corruption in connection with the bestowal of West Point cadetships, constitute a sorry commentary upon the practical working of our political system, and justify grave apprehensions and solicitude concerning the future. The feeling is intensified almost to the extent of despair by the knowledge that the revelations which are vouchsafed to the public are but isolated instances of the demoralization which exists, and that the people have reason to know that for every case which comes to their knowledge, hundreds escape detection.

The experience of years justifies the belief—we had almost said the positive knowledge—that the evil of legislative corruption is not confined to any one locality. Albany and Washington contain no fouler political atmosphere than other centers of legislation. The Governments of all the great cities, and the Legislatures of all the States, are similarly affected with the prevailing demoralization. The only distinction among them is in degree, and not in fact. It seems as if the very sources of republican government were poisoned, and that the experiment of self-government was a lamentable failure. We do not, of course, subscribe to so cynical a judgment, but we regard the political situation of the country as full of danger, and believe that unless some effective remedy is speedily applied, the evil will become chronic, and finally will require that "heroic treatment" which involves force and bloodshed.

The possibility of so grave a crisis renders important and legitimate the inquiry whether the evil is an inevitable one, and how it can be remedied. We maintain that it has arisen from the miserably defective system of primary political management which has been adopted, and from the fact that the most reliable class of our citizens deliberately and persistently shirk their duties by abstaining from political action. They are repelled by the unclean and disgusting associations which an active and conscientious discharge of their duties as American citizens involves, and the consequence is that selfish and corrupt demagogues are enabled to control, and that unworthy ambitions are gratified at the expense of the general welfare, and in disregard of the general will. We find corrupt ward and town politicians at the head of bodies of equally unscrupulous followers, controlling the minor nominations, and acting in obedience to the venal behests of county organizations, which in turn render a similar active allegiance to State juntas.

The evil has its inception with the people themselves, and with them lies the remedy. The class most deeply interested in the honest administration of affairs is really responsible for the great evil of which they complain. We are firm believers in the people, and in the doctrine that they are the only safe repositories of political power; but our conviction presupposes an active participation of all in the business of government, and a constant check and control of the corrupt by the good. So long as the intelligent, the honest and the tax-paying classes shall continue, through discouragement or indifference, to shirk their political duties, so long will corruption be the rule instead of the exception, and so long shall we be treated at intervals to sporadic revelations of corruption.

Shall We Surrender Our Common Schools?

If the great body of the people understood, what all close observers of current events know to be the fact, that a formidable conspiracy has been laid against our common schools, it is probable that there would not be so much apathy as now seems to exist on the subject. Several ministers have endeavored to rouse the public to a due sense of the crisis—Rev. G. H. HEPWORTH, Dr. R. W. CLARK, and Rev. Mr. STEELE among others—but, on the other hand, some preachers equally influential have not hesitated to avow their willingness to see first, the Bible laid under an interdict, and then to assent to the total destruction of the common school system. Their idea is that these concessions are due to the Roman Catholics on the ground of "tolerance." They have never asked what is due to Protestant parents and children, nor have they considered the fact that the cry for the suppression of the Bible and the dispersion of the school funds does not proceed from the bulk of the Catholic laity, who are glad to send their children to our schools, but from the priests, who see that their power declines under the influence of a sound and liberal education.

The foreign-born Catholics who come to this country send their children to our common schools without fear or hesitation. The priests have, indeed, striven to fill their minds with prejudices on the subject; and have even warned them of the danger they run in exposing their children to contact with "heretics." But what poor hard-working Catholic father, who is not thankful for the instruction our schools have afforded to his or her children? How many men are there among us who call themselves Catholics, who are as they are to a man, asking no questions about religion or race, and making no distinctions of persons. Some of these who came impatiently assert the right to reverse every feature of this policy, and to impose their own theories upon us. They say, "in the first place, we will not allow you to read the Bible. In the next, we will break up these schools of yours, and set up others where we can narrow the basis of education, and insist on conformity with the doctrines of a particular creed."

Do we over-state the demands of the Roman Catholics? If anybody supposes so, let him listen to the expressions of opinion in the Catholic journals. The Tablet, a paper of authority among Catholics, said only last Saturday, in reference to a proposed compromise, "No, gentlemen, that will not do, and there is no help but in dividing the public schools, or in abandoning the system of public schools altogether." The Catholic Telegraph, of Cincinnati, has declared, "It will be a glorious day for Catholics in this country when, under the blows of justice and morality, our school system will be shivered to pieces. Until then, modern Paganism will triumph." The Freeman's Journal, Dec. 11, says: "Let the public school system go to where it came from—the devil." 'We ask," says Bishop LYNCH, of New-Orleans, "that the public schools be cleansed from this peace-destroying monstrosity—Bible reading." "We cannot use the common schools," says Rev. THOMAS PRESTON, "because they answer not our end, nor satisfy our consciences." We might multiply quotations to the same effect until we filled this column, but we apprehend that no Catholic will repudiate the sentiments comprised in the extracts already given.

It will be seen that no half measures are proposed, and that so far from any anxiety being shown to conciliate Protestants, or to conduct the controversy in a courteous strain, offensive and violent language is very freely employed. There never was a contest so wantonly provoked by the Roman Church as this one. It trusts for success to the habit which most people have of making any concession for the sake of avoiding disputes and quarrels. "The Catholics," such persons say, "only want to do what they like with their own children." The truth is they want to do much more than this. They want to break up the educational system which has cost so much labor and thought to construct, and which has already been productive of such great benefits to the whole country. We ought never to assent to this course at the instigation of any sect whatever. The system has worked well, it has satisfied the great mass of parents, and to no class has it done greater service than to the Roman Catholics themselves. The children of the naturalized Catholics have received an education free from all bigoted ideas or superstitious precepts. This is one cause of their subsequent success in life. As for pretences put forward with respect to the Bible, Judge STORER well said, in giving his judgment upon the Cincinnati case, that the mere reading of the Scriptures, without note or comment, could not be deemed an act of worship in its commonly received definition. The same Judge added that its prohibition might, for the same reasons as those advanced by the Catholics, include the works of JOSEPHUS, POPE'S Essay on Man, MILTON'S Paradise Lost, HALLAM'S Middle Ages, PRESCOTT'S Philip II., and MOTLEY'S History of the Netherlands, "for each of these offend some conscience on the ground that private judgment is interfered with." The Methodist Convention, which met last month at Syracuse, passed a resolution declaring that there is "no legitimate power in any man, or combinations of men, to deny the use of the Bible for any length of time to any human being. It is our national book, and we will firmly and unitedly resist all attempts to remove it from our common schools." The same determination will animate the vast majority of the nation when the significance of the plot now forming comes to be properly appreciated. This is one of those contests which we would fain have avoided, but being once forced into it, we must pay no heed to timid or time-serving counsels, but show our antagonists that we are thoroughly in earnest, and that we are resolved, whatever may be threatened or done, to preserve our common schools intact, and the Bible with them. Our only motto now must be, "No surrender."

Army Brevets.

While there are many doubtful and many objectionable features in the Logan Army bill, as dispatched by the House and sent post-haste to the Senate, there is one which we think can be commended very warmly to the favor of the latter body,—and that is the section abolishing brevets.

This provision in Mr. LOGAN'S bill is sweeping in character and instantaneous in operation. It declares that "from and after the passage" of the act, brevet rank in the army "shall be abolished," and in order to effectually wipe out all its vestiges, it adds that "hereafter no officer shall assume the title or wear the uniform of a rank other than that of the grade actually held by him." Although so precise and peremptory, this section of the House Committee's bill was adopted without amendment and without debate, and we may safely predict a similar reception for it in the Senate.

To say the truth, the brevet system had been perverted from a privilege to a habit, till its rank had become not a distinction but a nuisance. At first, it was confined to its original purpose of advancing in nominal honors officers for whom vacancies in the actual grade to which they had been prevetted were not open. But soon brevets came in shoals, and not the having one but the lacking one was the noticeable thing. It can be shown that in many cases officers who would have shrunk from seeking preferment through the aid of friends were forced to have their names pushed for brevet, simply because the want of such an additional title was discriminative disrespect. The fashion had been set, and to appear in public without such an extra handle to the name was like a man's parading in some old-fashioned apparel.

There is no end to the ridicule which has been cast, and deservedly cast, on the service for this profuse distribution of distinctions which do not distinguish. It is said on high authority that, one night in the year 1864, a stick thrown at a dog in front of Willard's Hotel, at Washington, hit five Brigadier-Generals—"and it wasn't a good night for Brigadiers, either." Shoulder-straps are little when they are as common as greenbacks, and of about the same size; and brevet rank becomes trifling when boys are brevetted Brigadiers by the hundred, when Congress raises whole catalogues of Captains to be Colonels by brevet, and when, to cap the climax, States add their shoals of brevet ranks to those of the nation.

The only possible reform was, in Hamlet's phrase, to "reform it altogether." This is the remedy proposed in Mr. LOGAN'S bill, which accordingly will, we presume, have the support of those who enjoyed the brevet rank until it became so common as to be meaningless.

State and Federal Courts—Marshal Murray's Case.

The constitutional question recently decided by the Supreme Court at Washington, in the suit against the late Marshal of this district, is one of importance in relation to the conflicting powers of the State and the Federal Courts. Marshal MURRAY, during the rebellion, arrested a man named PATRIE, and had him imprisoned in Fort Lafayette for some time. When he was at length discharged, as a great many were, without any charge of any kind having been preferred against him, he sought a recompense for the whole proceeding by a suit against the Marshal for false imprisonment, which he brought in Greene County. The Marshal set up as a defense that he arrested PATRIE in pursuance of orders from the General Government at Washington. This plea, however, if it really existed, he failed to establish when the case came on for trial before a jury, and the result was a verdict and judgment against him for upwards of nine thousand dollars.

Congress had, in 1863, passed an act providing that in such a case either party might, before judgment or within six months after, have the cause removed to the United States Circuit Court, which should proceed to try the facts and the law as if the case had been commenced there, notwithstanding the judgment. Marshal MURRAY did not avail himself of the privilege of this statute before his case was tried, but after the judgment was entered against him he took steps in accordance with it by suing out a writ of error from the United States Circuit Court in this district, and this brought up the question between the State and the Federal Courts, which has just been decided by the State Courts. The Clerk of the State Court refused to make any return to the writ of error. A motion was made before the United States Circuit Court to order him to make the return. Judge NELSON'S decision ordering the return will be found reported in the fifth volume of Blatchford's Reports. The question of the constitutionality of the act of Congress appears to have been raised before him, but he refused to decide it at that stage of the case. A mandamus was subsequently applied for, directed to the Judges of the Supreme Court in Greene County, to compel them to make the proper return to the writ of error. On a hearing, the mandamus was directed to issue, and from the judgment directing it an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, which has just decided the case, reversing the decree of the Circuit Court and dismissing the application for a mandamus.

The point on which the decision turned was as to the meaning of the clause in the seventh article of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States, which provides that "no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any Court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law;" and the decision of the Supreme Court is, (1.) that this provision applies to facts tried by a jury in State Courts, as well as to facts so tried in the Courts of the United States; (2.) that, "according to the rules of the common law," a fact tried by a jury can only be re-examined in consequence of an order for a new trial by the Court which tried the case, or a reversal of the judgment by an appellate tribunal for some error of law committed at the trial; (3.) that the statute of 1863, which directs a new trial of such cases as are brought up from the State Courts in accordance with its provisions, as well after judgment as before it, is contrary to that provision of the Constitution, and is so far void.

It will be seen, therefore, that the State Courts are victorious in this contest. It was not so much a contest with the Federal Courts as with Congress, for Congress enacted the law which the Supreme Court has now set aside. We understand the decision to be limited, however, to the determination of questions of fact in the State Courts. As to questions of law, the supervisory power of the United States Courts is in no way affected, and if Marshal MURRAY has in his case the evidence to show that he acted under authority from the Government, that question may perhaps be carried before the United States Supreme Court to decide whether that was a legal exoneration of him. It, however, he had no such evidence, or by carelessness failed to present it, this decision would seem to say that it is now too late for him to remedy that error.

That was a strange device of the intolerant Democracy of California to drive John Chinaman from among them by putting a sac arest upon his corpse. The Celestial mind has a strange but strong superstition that his native land is nearest Heaven, and that his soul can never be happy so long as his bones lie in foreign soil. Taking advantage of this, the Democratic Solons of the Occident propose to prohibit the deportation of cadavers. The consequence will be that the Chinese will seek homes in other States until they shall overcome their foolish ideas, and adopt the better theory of the Thanatoists, thereby [illegible]

The journals which specially represent the laboring element have expressed hearty approval of Senator RAVENS' speech. The Sun has again declarly overzealous article on the question, detesting those who would keep up distinctions of race or class in the labor market after they are abolished in political life, and advocating perfect freedom for all. It says: "The trades unions of the country understand these things better than the politicians, and they believe in standing by the worker, whether white or black, male or female." It is important to know that the trades unions are taking this enlightened view of the subject, and the Sun may be assumed to speak with authority in reference to it. The whites need not fear the competition of the blacks, and there would be little excuse for the trades' unions arraying themselves in bitter persecution against the colored workman.

The Anti-Slavery Standard has a characteristic and violent appeal for renewed Congressional interference with the Reconstructed States, based upon the reports of renewed lawlessness at the South. It paints a gloomy picture of the condition of affairs in that section, and goes off into a paroxysm of indignation and retaliatory counsels. It thinks reconstruction a failure, and amnesty and conciliation a mistake; and holds that continued territorial rule and confiscation should have been inflicted. The Standard makes two mistakes. As the special organ of humanitarianism, it is vindictive and cruel; and as a loud asserter of the strength of the Government, it gives the world an implied cognovit of Federal weakness in the hour of Federal victory. It concedes by implication that the Government which was able to put down a great consolidated rebellion is not able to suppress a town mob, or enforce its laws against an unorganized rabble. Is it not better to assume and assert the power of the law than to be continually tearing down our own work in mere spite,—thus putting it in the power of bad men to keep the country in a condition of anarchy by their own acts?

The explosion of nitro-glycerine in New-Jersey, and the consequent loss of four lives, is another warning against the use of this most dangerous composition. If it is found absolutely indispensable for some work of unusual difficulty, it ought on no account to be stored in large quantities, especially in the neighborhood of cities. The explosion which occurred the other day was foretold in this journal last January. It was then pointed out that some such disaster would inevitably happen in this very place. Would it not be wise on the part of the authorities to prevent these accidents, as they might very easily do? By and by the trade in nitro-glycerine will have to be prohibited altogether.

If the criticism of our Paris correspondent be correct, Mr. A. T. STEWART has scarcely made so good an investment in the pictorial canvas of M. ADOLPHE YVON as in the level ground of Hempstead. The artist has, it seems, made a representation of "the United States of America," thirty feet by twenty, which the critic does not like in all its parts, especially in the faces of the States, which seem too much alike. But it is not so easy to translate Facies non omnibus una, nec, ut, olim—

"Not the same face for all; not yet diverse,
But as becometh sisters."

It would not be easy, for instance, to show how New-York should look, alongside her sister New-Jersey. But the thing is an allegory and meant to be an allegory; and we question if MICHAEL ANGELO himself could devise anything entirely satisfactory in such a very figurative style of art on such a subject, though at the same time we have an idea that some of our own artists might have made, at least, as good an attempt at a grand pictorial group of Continental metaphors as any Russian artist in Paris, or in Russia, either.

They order things curiously in France. Judging from history it might be supposed that there were several branches of study more important to French sailors than that of vocal music. We observe, however, by a recent order of the Minister Secretary of State, ROUAULT DE GERCOULIN, that "singing is to be regularly taught hereafter on board all vessels of the "fleets of evolution" and of iron-clads, on all carrying the flag of a general commanding officer, and on all carrying the ensign of a chief of division in certain squadrons. The teaching is to be by what is known as the Galin method, now much used in France. Vocal music has long been taught at the Naval School at Brest, but we believe this is the first instance of its formal introduction afloat. The rough old songs with which the matelots used to man the capstan will now give place, we presume, to the choruses and barcarolles of modern opera.

The American stockholders of Erie seem to be very indifferent to their interests. The English proprietors are trying to protect themselves, and if their fellow-shareholders in this country were to form an alliance with them, some substantial good might be effected. The Legislature could scarcely refuse to listen to the appeals of a combination representing the great body of proprietors.

The opening of a hall for chess-play, said to be the largest in the world devoted to such a purpose, takes place today in New-York. It is 110 feet in length and of proportionate width. Most of the chess-rooms in the principal cities of Europe are in suites, like those of the Paris Café de la Regence, few being of any great size. SIMPSON'S Grand Divan, in the Strand, London, is, or was, one exception—being about seventy-five feet long and forty wide. After MORPHY retired from the checkered field, the practice of chess dropped in our own Metropolis, and the only New-York club organized for its support was, for a time, with difficulty sustained. A revival has, however, lately sprung up, indications of which have been ready in the shape of matches and tournaments, and the opening of the hall to which we refer may be regarded as a sign that interest in the noblest of games is likely to take an abiding form among us.

Our proposition, that women should demonstrate in a more general and satisfactory manner than at present their capacity to govern their servants and friends before insisting upon having other and more arduous labor devolved upon them, meets favorable responses in many quarters. We are glad to know that there are plenty of educated and intelligent women—"strong-minded" ones, indeed, unceasing toilers for the improvement and elevation of their sex—who quite agree with us in this matter. Mrs. Brown and her sister Miss BURGESS are not far from the same opinions, as is shown by their book lately issued, and we are told that Mrs. ROBERT [illegible]

The "earth shall yield her dead" and "all the sea give up her dead" [illegible] Dr. MURRAY, who had been converted from Methodism by the preaching of JAMES RELLY, of London. Gloucester has been selected for the celebration, because at this town the first regular society of Universalists was gathered together, the same JOHN MURRAY being their first minister. The General Convention was organized in 1803, largely through the efforts of the well-known HOSEA BALLOU. We learn that it has been decided to raise $200,000 this year to be called "The Murray Centenary Fund," to be held forever as a permanent capital, and the income to be devoted to the missionary work of the Universalist Church.

Rev. F. D. MAURICE must now be included among the eminent men who advocate the admission of women to political power. He has written a letter to the Spectator in which he takes substantially this ground: Women already exercise a considerable indirect influence in politics. Why not allow them to exercise this power under a due sense of responsibility, "with a deliberate conviction, with a dread of sacrificing general interests to private partialities?" Mr. MAURICE contends that a woman would not discharge her home duties any the worse for being in possession of the rights of a citizen. "If the Legislature frankly admits women to the exercise of the suffrage, it will, I believe, gradually raise the tone of the whole land, by raising the tone of those who, often to their injury, govern its Governors. Mr. MAURICE'S argument will have more authority over many minds than Mr. MILL'S—the latter being full of inconsistencies, contradictions, and it is not too much to add, sophisms.

AMUSEMENTS.

Announcements of the Day.

"A New Way to Pay Old Debts," with Mr. EDWIN BOOTH as Sir Giles Overreach and Miss DE BAR as Margaret, is to be given this evening at Booth's, and will constitute the only important change of programme at any City theater. At the Academy of Music, however, an entertainment of interest is promised by the announcement of the production of "Der Freischütz" in English. How admirably Mme. PAREPA-ROSA sang Agatha in German when the opera was lately given by the Arion Society at the same place, is still fresh in our memory, and the fact that Miss HORNE will be Annunchen, and that Messrs. CASTLE and CAMPBELL are in the cast, offers, when we bear in mind that the Arion chorus takes part in the performance too, an assurance that the then excellent rendering of WEBER'S most characteristic and popular work will be fully equaled to-night. "The Black Domino," that amusing story of cross purposes, illustrated by as sprightly music as AUBER ever wrote, is to be performed on Tuesday.

Physical Changes in the Great American Desert.

The Inland Empire has the following statement concerning the process of change going on all over the great inland desert between California and Missouri:

"For some time past there has been a question before the people of this basin and of the plains east of the Rocky Mountains that has as yet failed to be satisfactorily answered. It is: Why are the streams carrying less water than in former years? The great plains are not losing their arid nature, and through them are running streams in places where twenty years ago there was not a drop of water; and where at that time there were small streams, they are now very much enlarged. In many cases this change is of great value, as it has given to the traveler a supply of water that had previously been denied. When the first emigrants crossed the Plains to California, the great objection urged to the trip was the scarcity of water on the great part of the route. Within a few years that has been all changed, and in the beds of old streams that were dry when first found, there is now water for all the purposes required.

The Laramie Plains are not now destitute of water, whereas some years ago there was none, and the traveler had to carry water on ropes over them. There can be no doubt that, for the last ten years, there has been a continued increase of water throughout the whole desert country between the Missouri and the Sierra Nevada. The Arkansas was dry in 1862, from the Pawnee Fork to the Cimarron crossing, and previous to that time the Platte was dried up, to that at many places the people were obliged to dig for water. And the Moro Valley and Plains were at that time almost destitute of vegetation. Now the vegetation is luxurious, and it is one of the very best wheat-growing sections.

Denver was built on the banks of an extinct creek, which it was supposed would remain dry, but, after the settlement, to the astonishment of the people, it became quite a stream, and is now crossed by bridges. The Huerfano, the Roye, Pecos, and others that were dry during the Summer months, ten years ago, are now constantly running in fair streams. We are satisfied that along the whole line of the Union Pacific Railroad there is much more moisture in the earth than there was only a few years since. Again, Salt Lake is seven feet higher than it was ten years ago, and it is constantly rising, and it has been urged by those who have paid attention to the subject, that the rise of water there would produce a solution on the Mormon question before Congress would act upon it. When the Salt Lake shall rise a few feet higher we shall look for its overflow to reach the Shell Creek range, as evidently at one time as water did cover what is now only an arid valley, not direct in its course, but out in, with ranges, still the connecting valley can be traced. This great increase of water will work a great revolution in the opinion of the people as to the capacity of the great plains for agricultural purposes.

The only reason why the great plains cannot be made into good fruit farms is the lack of water and timber, as soil and land in richness has no superior. The increase of water of which we have spoken will do away with one objection, and the discovery of coal over a distance east of Salt Lake for over six hundred miles will obviate the other. The man who travels over the Union Pacific Railroad twenty-five years from this time will find that the sage brush has given way to crops of all kinds growing in the greatest luxuriance, and that the sturdy farmers with happy homes have taken the places of the wandering red men. In our own State this increase of moisture has been noticed, and the old settlers do not hesitate to say that in many places the streams have increased more than one-fourth in size during the past five years, and in some places where there was no water, there there are now small but constantly running streams.

The Backward Migration of the Negroes.

From the New-Orleans Times, March 18.

A gentleman of this city, a large planter, just returned from Charlottesville, reports that by the regular official accounts of the railroads at that place, 21,000 negroes have passed through on their way to the States of Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and Louisiana. This influx is steadily increasing, and from the accounts which reach us of the great emigration of the negroes from the old States who have settled in this State, the high wages their services command on the sugar and cotton plantations, and the growing accounts they write back to their relatives and friends in the States of Virginia and the Carolinas, we should not be surprised if the seaboard States were relieved, in a very brief period, of their whole negro populations.

WASHINGTON.

The Revenue Decisions in New-York—The Investigation of Collector Bailey's Accounts—Mississippi Senatorship—The Hon. Keck Counsels Judge Bradley—Rivers and Harbors.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Commissioner DELANO has received intelligence that the investigation into Collector BAILEY'S accounts will show a probable deficiency of about $40,000, though it will be several days before the exact facts are known. This deficit is now believed to have existed for several years, and the dexterity with which it has been concealed is conceded to be very remarkable. BAILEY has paid into the Treasury during his official career an immense amount of money, and his accounts have been adjusted from time to time with scrupulous exactness, yet he has managed to conceal the fact that he was short as carefully that it did not appear in his accounts at any time, and was unknown even to his most trusted assistants. The sudden retirement made in one of the New-York papers that Commissioner DELANO was interested in the revelations expected to accrue from the searches made by Mr. BAILEY is not only untrue, but betrays such a lamentable ignorance of law and fact that it must bring ridicule upon the paper which gives currency to it.

THE MISSISSIPPI SENATORSHIP.

The case of Gen. AMES, Senator elect from Mississippi, will be called up to-morrow, and proceed to a vote if possible. The report of the Judiciary Committee that he is not eligible on the ground of non-residence will be strongly combated, and the prospect is that he will be given his seat. The action of the Legislature in this case has been misrepresented. Instead of making efforts to unseat Gen. AMES, the action of the Republican majority has been the very reverse, as witness the following dispatches received by Gen. AMES last night and this morning:

First—You were unanimously and enthusiastically renominated in full caucus for the Senate. If now elected, Resolutions adopted forwarded by mail. Signed FRENCH, member of the Assembly.

Second—Come home. We will return you by an increased majority. Signed MORGAN, State Senator.

Third—Come back. We will re-elect you unanimously.

Fourth—Caucus unanimously passed resolutions requesting the Senate to give you your seat.

From these demonstrations it will be seen that should Gen. AMES be rejected he will probably be returned at once by the same Legislature, and being then divested of his military character, and claiming that State as his residence, no possible objection to his admission can exist.

THE NEW-YORK FOURTH REVENUE DISTRICT.

The transfer of Marshal HARLOW to the Collectorship of the Fourth District must be accepted as a compliment by that gentleman's friends, since the President, desiring to place Gen. SHARPE in the Marshal's office, declined to remove Mr. HARLOW without a recognition of that gentleman's honest and efficient administration. This recognition was bestowed by the change and the nomination of Gen. SHARPE as Marshal then made, while this last appointment has been made without the aid of any of the political influences which are so potent in the State of New-York. It will undoubtedly prove very acceptable to all, since Gen. SHARPE possesses not only remarkable fitness for the peculiar duties of this position, but political sagacity, which will make him a successful manager. These appointments, therefore, do not mean CONKLING or FENTON, this committee or that committee, but GRANT, the revenue and the Republican Party.

THE NEW-YORK CANALS.

The sub-Committee of the House having charge of the bill which Mr. BENNETT introduced some time ago in reference to the canals and the Northwestern frontier have decided to report it favorably to the full Committee, and it will probably be sent to the House this week with the indorsement of the Committee. The provisions of the bill are virtually that the General Government shall issue its bonds to the State of New-York, payable in coin at four and a half per cent. per annum, on the pledge of the State that it will so enlarge the Erie and Oswego Canals as to make them capable of accommodating vessels of six hundred tons burden; that the State debt for the payment of the canals shall be discharged, and that the canal toll in future shall not exceed one-half mill per thousand tons per mile. The advantages of the bill to the commerce and trade of the country are very obvious.

JUDGE BRADLEY AND THE SUPREME BENCH.

If the Senate abides by its resolution passed some time ago in reference to Judge BRADLEY for the Supreme Bench, as it probably will, the nomination of that gentleman will be taken up to-morrow in Executive Session. The postponement was made, it will be remembered, to enable the Southern members to make the effort to secure the withdrawal of Mr. BRADLEY, and the nomination of a man from their own section. In this, as far as the sending of a new name is concerned, they have not been successful, and so the matter stands. The chances of Mr. BRADLEY are hardly so good now as they were three weeks ago, when he was last considered.

THE RIVERS AND HARBORS.

One of your contemporaries, on Friday evening last, printed a long list of harbors in various parts of the country, appending thereto the amount asked for the improvement of each harbor, making in all about $11,000,000. The article was printed under the sensation headline of "The River and Harbor Gang." But the journal in question did not state, as it should have stated, that neither the inhabitants of the particular places in question, Congress, nor the Administration, was responsible for these figures, but that they were simply the estimates of the Engineer Department, which are always largely reduced by Congress. For instance, the estimates this year are, as given above, about eleven millions; the chances are that Congress will not appropriate two millions for the purpose.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

THE TARIFF BILL.

The debate in the House of Representatives on the Tariff bill will be resumed on Tuesday, when it is expected that Representative ALLISON, of Iowa, who is opposed to the bill, will express his views on the subject, and Representative KELLEY will reply to him. An effort will be made to close the general debate before the expiration of the week.

THE MEMPHIS AND EL PASO RAILROAD.

In the official correspondence recently transmitted to the Senate in regard to the so-called "Transcontinental Memphis, El Paso and Pacific Railroad Company," occurs the following letter from Minister WASHBURNE to the Secretary of State:

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES, PARIS, Dec. 24, 1869.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your dispatch, No. 74, under date of the 16th inst., inclosing a translation of a letter addressed to you by one Capt. A. SAUZAY, of the French Army, on the subject of the application for information relative to the Memphis and El Paso Railroad Company, and also your reply thereto.

It is perhaps proper that I should say a word in regard to that matter. The gentleman called on me for information in regard to the so-called Transcontinental Railroad bonds, saying that he had invested some 80,000 francs in their purchase, and that he felt a good deal of uneasiness in relation to his investment. He had, therefore, come to the Legation to seek information. I received him courteously and explained to him fully, as I have explained to all others, that from the time of my arrival at Paris, repeated many inquiries were made of me on that subject; that while I had my own opinions, I preferred seeking official information from my Government; I had, therefore, written and obtained such information, which had always been at the disposition of the public; not only that, but other information sent at the request of the Company, had always been equally at the disposition of the public; thus if he wished money in regard to his investment, he had better seek the parties in Paris who had put the loan on the market, but I declined to give him any advice whatever as to what he should do with his bonds, though he pressed me very hard to tell him what I thought he had better do with them.

A few days afterward I received the letter, a copy of which he seems to have sent to you. On reading the letter, I was convinced from its tone and spirit that it was not addressed to me for the purpose of obtaining information in good faith. On the other hand, I was satisfied that it was concocted by parties who had confederated together to impose the Transcontinental Bonds on the French public in order to draw me into [illegible] I thought it my duty to do what I could to put a stop to this circumvention. I declined answering the communication of Capt. SAUZAY. I am confirmed in the impression I had in regard to the communication from the circumstance that it was addressed to you, and which was evidently inspired from the same source.

I thank you for transmitting to me a translation of his letter to you, together with your reply thereto.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant, E. B. WASHBURNE.

Hon. HAMILTON FISH, Secretary of State.

Mr. Fish to Mr. Washburne.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, Jan. 7, 1870.

SIR: Referring to your No. 756 of the 24th ult., in relation to the complaint of Capt. SAUZAY, in connection with the Transcontinental Memphis Pacific Railroad, I have to inform you in reply that your proceedings as therein explained are approved. I am, Sir, your obedient servant, HAMILTON FISH.

E. B. WASHBURNE, Esq., &c.

BANKS ORGANIZED SINCE JAN. 1, 1869.

The following list from the Controller of the Currency contains the names of banks organized and furnished with circulating notes since Jan. 1, 1869, and the amount each bank has received:

The First National Bank of Austin, Minn.	$97,000
The Union-square National Bank of New-York City	50,000
The National Bank of Commerce of Chicago, Ill.	90,000
The National Bank of Lebanon, Ky.	50,000
The First National Bank of Utah, at Salt Lake City	50,000
The First National Bank of Leon, Iowa	22,500

These banks provided the means which enabled me to supply them with circulation, by the surrender and cancellation of the notes of broken banks, or by the surrender and transfer of circulation for that purpose by some other bank, as follows:

The First National Bank of Austin, Minn., returned	$97,000
The Union-square National Bank of New-York City, a surrender and transfer of	16,000
Redeemed and returned the notes of the First National Bank of Danville, Va., (in liquidation)	5,800
Redeemed and returned the notes of the National Bank of Commerce of Georgetown, D. C., (in liquidation)	12,700
Making in all	$54,500

The National Bank of Lebanon, Kentucky, returned broken bank notes, amount, $50,000.

The First National Bank of Utah, at Salt Lake City, was a reorganization of the old Miners' National Bank of Salt Lake, and obtained circulation by the return of the notes of the last-named bank to the amount of $50,000.

The First National Bank of Leon, Iowa, returned the notes of broken banks to the amount of $2,000, and procured a transfer of $20,500 from the Metropolitan National Bank of New-York City.

Having no other means at my disposal, I was able to supply only those banks which returned notes as above stated.

Circulation has not been withheld from banks previously organized, because that would imply that I had circulation remaining at my disposal, which was not the case.

MILITARY AFFAIRS.

The House Committee on Military Affairs have for the present completed their investigation into the cadet business, and turned their attention to the heavy current business before them, which includes about 250 cases of various kinds.

SELLING PRODUCE.

Representative REVES has had further correspondence with the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which adheres to its decision, heretofore announced, that farmers selling their produce from wagons or stalls in cities must pay the special license tax of $10 as produce brokers. There are indications that the Committee of Ways and Means will strike out this legal feature from the Internal Revenue bill.

RETURNS OF FARM PRODUCE.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue decides that farmers are required to make returns of produce sold within the year, but not required to return produce raised until the same is sold.

THE PAVONIA RIOT.

Statement of William Taylor, the Victim—His Condition Precarious—Examination Before the Recorder, and Statement of the Prisoners—The Rioters to be Discharged by the Erie Railway Company.

The unprovoked riot by a gang of thirty to forty Erie Railway stevedores, on Saturday evening, and the attempt to murder a well-known citizen—WILLIAM TAYLOR, keeper of the saloon at the Pavonia Ferry—has caused much excitement and indignation at Jersey City.

Mr. TAYLOR'S injuries are much more serious than at first supposed, and his recovery is extremely doubtful. The instigator of the riot, ABE ACKERMAN, foreman over the men employed in the loading and unloading of freight—some 400 in all, has fled, but the Police are making every effort to secure his arrest. He is described as a very bad man, especially when under the influence of liquor, and is held in terror by very many who know him.

STATEMENT OF MR. TAYLOR.

About a year ago, ACKERMAN, while drunk, came into my place where there were a lot of drivers waiting for the arrival of a train, by some of whom he claims to have been robbed, two of whom he caused to be arrested; the next morning when I came down to the saloon, he told me a man by the name of BLISS had robbed him, and wanted to know what kind of a house I kept; I said, "Way up."

REDDY THE BLACKSMITH.

He replied there were a lot of thieves in there, and Reddy the Blacksmith was among them; I said he had he knew it was Reddy, and he replied that he knew him when he was a keeper in the State Prison; I told ACKERMAN that I was sorry that he had been robbed, and went with him to the Police Station to see if there was any chance to recover his property; when we got there, I found that the persons he had caused to be arrested were two respectable men, Mr. BLISS, of Brooklyn, and another man, brother-in-law of Mr. TAYLOR, Superintendent of the New-Jersey Express Company; I procured a man to go bail for BLISS, and ever since that time ACKERMAN has been in for me, and never came into the place except when in liquor; on these occasions he would bring up this old robbery, and would use most abusive language; finally I told him I did not want him to come into the place, and would not have him.

Yesterday afternoon, ACKERMAN came in the saloon with a gentleman, and asked him to take a drink, but he refused; then he turned and commenced to abuse me, using very profane and ungentlemanly language; I tried to pacify him, but he still continued his abusive language, when I went to put him out; he struck at me twice, which I parried, and struck a light blow on the nose; officer MOULDS came in and wanted to look ACKERMAN up, but I told the officer not to arrest him, and that I would take care of him; the officer then went out, and I asked ACKERMAN to take a drink, and thinking it was all settled, and wishing to avoid any further trouble, the first I knew, MOORE, my bar-tender, came up and said, "Come down BILL for God's sake, they are killing KENNY;" (a runner;) I went down through the restaurant into the bar-room, when I was attacked on all sides, and they beat me, and I have no recollection what occurred after that; I know nothing about the shooting.

EXAMINATION BEFORE THE RECORDER.

JAMES CONNELL, an alleged ringleader in the Riot, and Thos. KEELEY, the man that was shot in the back of the head, were arraigned before Recorder MARTINDALE, at the Police Court yesterday forenoon, a large crowd of interested spectators being present.

RECORDER—Well, young men, I see you have been arrested on a charge of atrocious assault and battery on WILLIAM TAYLOR.

CONNELL—I aint been arrested; I walked down here to answer bail.

RECORDER—I've heard from Mr. TAYLOR this morning, and the physician says he is lying in a very precarious condition; his head and face are cut and bruised in the most shocking manner, but his bodily injuries are the most serious.

CONNELL—I had nothing to do with it; if Mr. TAYLOR, his colored man and another man hadn't commenced to fire there'd been no trouble at all.

RECORDER—If you went with the crowd, who, I understand, went there to create a disturbance, you are as guilty as those that participated.

CONNELL—The cooper and one another man went over to bring Mr. ACKERMAN away, and then some of the men from the dock came after us.

OFFICER MOORE—I saw some fifteen men going into TAYLOR'S and followed them in; another lot of men followed and commenced firing pistols and throwing bottles; I saw KINNEY and CONNELL kicking TAYLOR, and CONNELL was standing over him with a revolver.

Chief FOWLER—TAYLOR told me that this man CONNELL was the instigator of the riot.

CONNELL—I took the pistol from TAYLOR just after he was shooting that man (KEELEY,) and had it pointed at my breast to shoot me.

RECORDER—I shall be compelled to lock you two men up to await the result of Mr. TAYLOR'S injuries; he says you (CONNELL) were the main instigator of the riot.

CONNELL—Is there no bail?

RECORDER—No, Sir; I cannot admit you to bail.

The prisoners were then conducted to the cells.

Yesterday a gentleman holding a prominent position in the Erie Railway Company stated that every one of the men concerned in the riot would be discharged from their employ.

THE STATE IN DANGER.

Inroads of Catholicism in This Country.

Rev. George H. Hepworth Expounds the Note of Alarm—The Papal Usurpation—Its Work in Ellis Hutchinson—An Appeal to Americanism to Arouse.

The Church of the Messiah, at the corner of Park-avenue and Thirty-fourth-street, was thronged last evening by an audience anxious to listen to a discourse by Rev. GEO. H. HEPWORTH, pastor of the Church, on the subject of Catholicism and the rapid strides it is making in this country. He selected his text from the eighth chapter of St. Luke and the sixth verse, "On a Rock." He introduced his subject by saying that every man ought to have a platform of principles and adhere to them. The great difference between the Protestant and the Catholic was that the latter insists that what was true in the fourth century is also true in the nineteenth century, and the Catholic Church uses the same ecclesiastical appliances and doctrines now that she did one thousand years ago. It insists that there has been no change of doctrine. But history has proved conclusively that what one age believed to be true another age knows to be false. The essence of Catholicism is immovability; the essence of Protestantism is development. The Catholic Church does not admit of progress, while the Protestant Church inspires progress and believes that he is the true member of that body who looks forward to a new revelation which God makes as living man.

When Rip Van Winkle went to sleep in the Catskill Mountains, the world moved on. When he awoke from his sleep, he found things had changed, and he failed to recognize objects which were once familiar to him. It seems that we too have gone to sleep, and, on awaking, find that the world, instead of going forward, has acceded two or three ages. When we see such things as the Pope's syllabus and his canons, it seems that we are living in some feudal age, and are beneath the castle walls of some despot. The speaker said he was not a partisan, and would not lift a hand in favor of Protestantism as a sect. If he had his way, he would tear down every barrier between the various Protestant creeds, and urge all to unite in the endeavor to make common cause against the great enemy of the Protestant religion—Catholicism. He did not address his audience in the interests of the Protestant Church, neither did he talk to Americans alone. He would to God that he had an audience of Catholics that he might put his subject in a logical light and show them that America is the home for the oppressed of all nations; but that in inviting emigration we ask that while the emigrant has full liberty to worship God according to the religion he may ask that our religious institutions shall not be interfered with in any manner whatever. We say to the foreigner, Come! we greet you with open arms, and besides a welcome will give each of you 160 acres of land and every facility to make of you good Americans. Whoever he is oppressed let him come here. But the speaker said he was a foe to ignorance and superstition and despotism, no matter under what flag it was shielded. Unless we can by means of a common religion sweep ignorance away our country is doomed to destruction. The situation of affairs at the present time was truly alarming, and he proposed to speak of them without fear or favor. He had no ax to grind, and did not propose to give any body else an opportunity to grind any body else's ax. He urged his hearers to take hold of this great question in their minds and not let it slip out of their hands any longer. If we had taken hold of slavery when it was young, we could have choked it to death, but as it was it came near choking us to death. We had spent a million of lives and almost untold treasure to crush it when it threatened to obtain the mastery, while if we had grappled with the question in its infancy we could have readily obtained the mastery. So it is with this question. If we stand on the rock and are invincible in our position the whole question will settle itself, but if we procrastinate and look on and see what the Church is making upon our institutions the whole fabric of the government will totter to ruin. This edifice, for instance was strong and almost immovable. But suppose one stone should be removed and then another and another until the building was weakened, it would then totter to the ground. We must not procrastinate in this matter, but act promptly and determinedly. Say what you mean now and use simple moral courage in your management of public affairs, which has not been shown in the last generation in America.

AN IRREPRESSIBLE CONFLICT.

As set forth in the Catholic journals and in the last syllabus of the Pope there appears an antagonism between the Catholics and Protestants which can never be appeased. The Pope has drawn the sword and declared a war against Protestantism which will continue until one or the other is conquered. He has thrown the gauntlet of defiance, and for one he, the speaker, did not hesitate to pick it up. There is a fundamental principle of antagonism between these two Churches which makes it impossible that there can ever be a lasting and the allegiance between the people and the Old Church is broken. Protestantism is tolerant, and permits every man to worship God in his own way. The Catholic says there shall be no toleration, and that every soul who does not place implicit reliance in the Mother Church shall be damned. If a member of that sect refuses obedience to the mandates of the priest he is liable to be burned at the stake. This question is of infinite importance. It is more important than that of slavery, or of the Mormons in Utah, or of the Indians on the Plains, or of universal suffrage. Gentlemen, I question you if I keep for a little while, while this will not know. If we take one step backward, we will be compelled to take a dozen steps. The Catholic Church owes no political allegiance to this country. The individual members of that Church owe allegiance to the Pope alone, and would fight you if commanded to do so notwithstanding the oath which they have taken renouncing allegiance to the country from which they came. When the English Church came here in the revolution the members joined our institutions and remained true. They no longer called Bishops consecrated in the mother country, but chose them from this. Such is not the case with the Catholics, who have no Bishops or rulers save those who are consecrated by the Pope or one of his emissaries. It is this foreign political element in this country which is destined to bring a cause to bear upon us. This foreign power is already felt, and is becoming stronger every day.

THE POPE'S PLANS.

The speaker said that he believed that the Catholic element had for twenty years been working, according to settled plans, with the object of getting control of our institutions. It was a very shrewd Church, and the best organized in Christendom. It is now laying plans which it will come to fruition before the close of the present century. It was proposed to change our public school system by blowing it up with gunpowder—by annihilating it completely. When the Catholic boy goes to one of our free schools he becomes intractable for all purposes of a Catholic education before he is twenty-one. He is enlightened, and cannot be hoodwinked by the superstitions and mummeries of the religion in which he was born. The Catholic Church never has flourished where the children have been permitted to attend free schools, and have access to the Bible. The Pope declares that the whole school system of America is dangerous to the Catholic Church; that it is an error of the age that schools should be entirely free from ecclesiastical influence. (The speaker here quoted from the Pope's syllabus to prove his assertions.) The Pope will have to interfere with our common school system of this country. Let him do it, if he dare!

VALUE OF THE BIBLE.

The Bible is worth more than any other book we have in the schools. It is the foundation of our Government. The Declaration of Independence was based on the Sermon on the Mount. Take the Bible out of the schools and we would go to destruction, for we would be like those who love darkness rather than light. The Catholics have fought the Bible inch by inch. They have said, I suppose, that there were questions, but he stood firm, and they would have burned him at the stake if they had dared. The speaker here quoted from the Catholic catechism to show what may and who may not read the Bible. The children are instructed that the Fathers of the Church may read it; but that the more the laity read the less they will know about it. There is not a Catholic boy in this City who has not this catechism by heart.

THE PRESS THREATENED.

The Catholic clergy would control the Press if they could. It is the divine right of the citizen to discuss public questions, and the Press—that mighty engine—aids in this free discussion all over the country. Let the Catholics gain the ascendency in America and you would have the Press muzzled by censors, who would forbid the discussion of any measure that they pleased. They would control the telegraph as well, and practice the same despotic arts that they did in many of the countries of Europe.

SUBVERTING THE GOVERNMENT.

The Catholics would subvert the republican form of government. The Pope has called ours a godless Government. Think of that! Where is there a country on the face of the earth more noble and god-like? We take the slaves of Europe and make them free men. The Pope would make it a godless Government if he had his control of it, but he cannot. The people of countries which are priest-ridden have no rights which are not given them as a charity. The moment those people commence to think for themselves they cease to be good Catholics.

SMOKING CAPTS.

When a man takes an oath as a Bishop in the Catholic Church, he swears to persecute all heretics, schismatics and unbelievers to the utmost of his ability. In the old days of the Inquisition, the Government was the tool of the Church, and it was easy to persecute; but now there is no King or State, and yet the Government of Protestant America is the only one which is roughly advised, so that measures are taken to entrench herself. Protestants, they may be found. The speaker quoted from a Catholic journal, which said in effect that the Pope desired the Catholics to overthrow the Government of this country. They would not hesitate to do so, and present it as an offering to Pontiff. If the Catholic Church has its own way, the speaker said, the Protestants alone. He would to God that he had an audience of Catholics that he might put his subject in a logical light and show them that America is the home for the oppressed of all nations; but that in inviting emigration we ask that while the emigrant has full liberty to worship God according to his religion he may ask that our religious institutions shall not be interfered with in any manner whatever. Take the Bible out of the schools and we would go to destruction, for we would be like those who love darkness rather than light. The Catholics have fought the Bible inch by inch. They have said, I suppose, that there were questions, but he stood firm, and they would have burned him at the stake if they had dared. The speaker here quoted from the Catholic catechism to show who may and who may not read the Bible. The children are instructed that the Fathers of the Church may read it; but that the more the laity read the less they will know about it. There is not a Catholic boy in this City who has not this catechism by heart.

THE PRESS THREATENED.

The Catholic clergy would control the Press if they could. It is the divine right of the citizen to discuss public questions, and the Press—that mighty engine—aids in this free discussion all over the country. Let the Catholics gain the ascendency in America and you would have the Press muzzled by censors, who would forbid the discussion of any measure that they pleased. They would control the telegraph as well, and practice the same despotic arts that they did in many of the countries of Europe.

SUBVERTING THE GOVERNMENT.

The Catholics would subvert the republican form of government. The Pope has called ours a godless Government. Think of that! Where is there a country on the face of the earth more noble and god-like? We take the slaves of Europe and make them free men. The Pope would make it a godless Government if he had his control of it, but he cannot. The people of countries which are priest-ridden have no rights which are not given them as a charity. The moment those people commence to think for themselves they cease to be good Catholics.

CONCLUSION.

The speaker concluded his very eloquent discourse, which was listened to with the deepest attention, by quoting the parable of the Arabian and the camel. An Arabian was in his hut one day, sheltered from the storm, when a camel put his head in and asked if he might shelter his head from the pelting of the rain. The Arabian consented reluctantly, and in went the camel's head. The animal then complained that his fore-shoulders were wet and he wanted to put them under the tent. The Arabian consented and in went the fore-shoulders. Then said the camel: "My hind-quarters are exposed to the rain; won't you let them come in?" Said the Arabian: "The tent is not large enough for two of us, but I pity you; yes, you may bring your hind-quarters in." The camel came in, and looking about, said: "True, the tent is small and there is not room for both of us; you must get out." And out the poor Arabian was kicked out of his own tent. The application of the fable was apparent, and the audience saw the point of it.

PAPAL FALLIBILITY.

Sermon by Rev. Dr. Beach at St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Twentieth-street and Eighth-avenue.

Rev. Dr. BEACH preached last evening at St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Twentieth-street and Eighth-avenue, on the question of the Papal Infallibility, selecting for his text the words, "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good"—Chap. v. 21: St. Paul to the Thessalonians. The reverend gentleman said that however unreasonable and absurd any claim made on their religious faith may be, they could hardly be justified in treating it with contempt so long as they knew there was a considerable number of their fellow-beings who, through ignorance or otherwise, were entertaining it seriously, and their unbelief bore the semblance of hostility to Christianity. When such a claim was solemnly persisted in, especially when sanctioned by a large religious body, the very sense of its absurdity disappears, and, by a sort of reaction of feeling, they begin to think there must be some substantial ground for it, and that they themselves were in the wrong. In reference to the question of infallibility now advanced before the world by the Romanists, there were three grounds upon which it was sought to be maintained—reason, tradition and Scripture. In support of "reason" it was asserted that though the basis of Christianity was the Divine Revelation, the permission to allow all its members to form their own opinion on the Scriptures was the fruitful source of heresy and dissensions, which, produced a vast amount of evil, hindered the progress of Christianity, and therefore, it was necessary it should be authoritatively determined. But now came the question what was meant by the Church. It was not to be taken for granted that the Church of Rome was the Church, for however ancient and large, it was yet but a portion of the great Christian body and its assertion of supremacy, when it undertook to act as having exclusive jurisdiction over the whole world of believers, was an unwarrantable usurpation. Nor did it follow that the Church should be formally accompanied with the attribute of infallibility; but it was sufficient that the teachers should know the truth, and Christ promised to secure them from all vital mistakes concerning things necessary to salvation, though that did not keep them from all possible errors on matters of faith. For his part he held that with reference to all truth necessary to salvation, the teachings of the Bible were sufficiently plain to preserve mankind from heresy, and to promote universal unity and concord. It was then claimed by the Church of Rome that from the earliest period it enjoyed a premium over all others, and adjudicated upon all religious differences. But this did not favor the doctrine of infallibility, for it could not be shown that the Pope, and the Councils over which he presided, were exempt from liability to err, but, on the contrary, the moment he attempted to assume such a supremacy he was sharply rebuked. In the writings of St. CYPRIAN of Carthage, St. AMBROSE, JEROME, AUGUSTINE and CHRYSOSTOM, and in the Councils of Constantinople and Nineveh, the infallibility was denied, and St. CYPRIAN, in a theological discussion he entered into with Pope Stephen, went so far as to condemn and his perseverance and obstinacy in no measured terms. The Council of Carthage supported St. CYPRIAN, and in the Council of Nineveh it was decreed that in the settlement of religious differences no appeal should be made to any authority outside the Church to which it belonged. They not only refused to entertain the question of infallibility, but refused supremacy, and treated the Papal pretensions as something to be guarded against. The third ground relied on for its maintenance was Scripture and the words addressed by Christ to St. Peter: "Upon this rock I will build my Church, and the gates of Hell shall not prevail against you," were set forth. This, he contended, referred merely to its perpetuity, and did not affect the matter of infallibility. Again, the words, "He that will not hear the Church, let him be accounted a heathen and a publican," were quoted; but by the "Church" was not meant the doctrine of Romanism, but the universal congregation of all religions who professed belief in Christ, and if it were proved infallibility vested anywhere, it would be in that universal Church. It was undeniable that Christ promised to be with his Church for all time, even unto the end of the world, but He did not necessarily promise its exemption from error, for He had promised "wherever two or three disciples were gathered together in His name, He would be with them and abide and dwell within them." St. Paul said the "Church was the pillar and ground of Truth;" but, if he meant any Church in particular, it was the Church of Ephesus and not the Church of Rome, which he never was in. But the ap

THE FOX WILL CASE.

Constitution, but No Undue Influence Shown.

The trial of the interesting case of the will of CHARLES FOX was continued on Friday in the Surrogate's Court, before Surrogate HUTCHINGS, the first witness examined being Gen. Jas. Jones, who knew the deceased in 1868, believes he was sane (but doubtful); he was then very eccentric, if not crazy; he was a very troublesome employee, always finding fault without cause; was troubled the witness to build a high wall adjoining his premises to save himself from constant annoyance; the principal difficulty complained of was the overrunning of the water hydrant in witness' yard. A German physician next testified that he had been a tenant of deceased for some time in 1868, and although never called to attend him professionally, yet witness had frequent opportunities of judging of his condition; he was of very nervous temperament, easily excited, and when sick would take pills of his own manufacture, as he had no faith in physicians; he purchased his own food, and cooked it himself, and was most healthy and cheerful when the gospel of his own was often quoted; the plans complained that he had been defrauded from bonds disclosed. Mrs. MARY HUDSON, another tenant, knew Mr. FOX when he was a little girl, and spoke a few years before his death; he visited his sisters, accepting his claims; he carried nothing for his relatives, and said they should not have any of his property. The trial will be continued next week.

$30,000 TO LOAN ON FIRST-class City property, principally to WARD, JOHNS & WHITEHEAD, No. 8 WALL-ST.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. GOLD LOAN
OF THE
Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Minnesota R. R. Co.'s
FIRST MORTGAGE
50-YEAR BONDS,
At 95, Free of United States Tax.

These Bonds will mature, principal and interest, in gold, at New-York or London; the interest payable in May and November.

They are convertible into stock, and are guaranteed by a Sinking Fund.

They are issued upon the several sections of the road only as the same are completed and in successful operation.

They are guaranteed not only by a first lien upon the entire property and franchises of the Company, but also by new and ample earnings, and an equity equivalent to the cost of the road, and there can be deposited the bonds currently issued in exchange for the road, subject to equities to arrange.

Over Three Million Dollars have been already expended on the road.

Twelve hundred miles of road are already completed and equipped, and earning large earnings; and the completion of the line is proceeding rapidly towards completion.

The State of Iowa, through which the road runs, is one of the richest agricultural sections of America. The large and extending population, and the immense value of agricultural products, create a pressing demand for the construction of this road.

The road runs through the fertile and growing state of Minnesota. It traverses the most enterprising and growing portion of the West, and forms the shortest of the great trunk lines in direct connection with New-York, Chicago and St. Louis.

We recommend these bonds, with the greatest confidence as a safe and desirable investment.

All marketable securities at their full price, free of commission and exchange charges, received in payment. Pamphlets and maps furnished on application.

Last evening, in West Broadway, JOHN MCDERMOTT was attacked by THOMAS MORIN, who was armed with a knife, but only succeeded in inflicting a slight flesh wound. The assailant was arrested and locked up in the Franklin-street Station-house.

A kerosene lamp exploded last evening in the apartment of SAMUEL GARDINER, on the fourth floor of No. 77 Allen-street, but without doing any damage. Another kerosene lamp exploded in the tailor-shop of VALENTINE BORENSTEIN at No. 60 Norfolk-street, setting fire to the premises and causing a loss of $100 on the stock.

Between 8 A. M. and 9 P. M. of yesterday a party of burglars entered the jewelry-store of SAMUEL PICKETT, No. 419 Hudson-street, who leisurely ransacked the entire place and got away unobserved with plunder valued at $400.

HUGH MCCANN, who was awaiting trial for burglary, was taken sick in the Tombs and sent to the Hospital on Blackwell's Island, from which institution he escaped yesterday, and is still at large.

MARY HARRIS yesterday made an assault upon WILLIAM FIELD, of No. 92 Prince-street, armed with a large knife, and cutting him across the face and on the leg, both wounds being severe. She was arrested during the afternoon and locked up in the Prince-street Station-house.

BROOKLYN.

On Saturday, at 4 P. M., THOMAS CUSACK and his wife BRIDGET began to quarrel while in a state of intoxication, in their residence, No. 42 Nelson-street. In the heat of the dispute THOMAS seized a broomstick, and bringing it down with considerable force upon the head of his spouse, felled her to the ground. A pretty severe wound was inflicted. The offending husband was arrested.

The Lafayette-avenue Church of Brooklyn (Rev. T. L. CUYLER's) received fifty-six members into fellowship and communion yesterday. During the present revival one hundred have united, of whom sixty were on confession of their faith.

The event of Saturday evening at the Skating Rink was a boys' race. About a dozen youths of twelve to fourteen years of age, entered the lists. The course was five times round the rink, and the contest was won easily by Master HARRY JONES, who received the silver medal awarded as a prize. There was a large attendance of the general public, and the amusement of the evening was kept up till a late hour, the consciousness that but few more such opportunities could be expected this season evidently lending zest to the enjoyment of those present.

At 10½ P. M., JOHN NORTH, residing at No. 192 Smith-street, fell from the front platform of a South-street car, and the wheel passing over his leg, sustained a fracture which necessitated his removal to the Long Island College Hospital.

The watchman of the ship Hudson, a man named H. W. SWIFT, while passing yesterday morning from the ship to the dock, lost his balance and fell, injuring himself severely. He was conveyed to the City Hospital.

LONG ISLAND.

Capt. WM. CLARK, of the sloop Velocity, of Port Jefferson, had a narrow escape from drowning on his recent passage from New-York to that place. While hauling aft the main sheets, some of the tackling gave way, and he was thrown overboard. The vessel at that time was making about eight knots. Happily, the Captain kept a firm hold of the sheet, and had enough presence of mind to order the man at the wheel to put the helm down, but a heavy flaw happening at the time tightened the sheets in such a manner that the Captain managed to climb on board. He was a long time in the water, and was greatly benumbed.

On Saturday strong resolutions were passed by the Queens County Republican Central Committee calling for the repeal of the section of the International Revenue laws which imposes a license fee of $10 for farmers selling their own produce.

The number of vessels enrolled at the Port Jefferson Custom-house is 224, of which 146 are over 20 tons; 42 sloops and 42 schooners, with a tonnage of 11,346 44-100. Of these 90 are under license, with a tonnage of 1[illegible] tons. Besides the above, 4 brigs and 17 schooners still under stores cleared at the New-York Custom-house, belonging at Port Jefferson, and have a tonnage of 1,319 69-100, making an aggregate owned at this port of 12,666 13-100. This is the most important harbor of Long Island Sound. There is a strong effort being made by Representative RENYE to secure the appropriation for a breakwater by the Government for this harbor.

The following nominations were made by the Flushing Town Assembly, at the annual nomination of Flushing: [illegible] Town Clerk, S. D. Roe; Receiver of Taxes, G. W. AFRICAN COLONIZATION.

Meeting of the American Colonization Society at the Church of the Ascension—Addresses by Hon. J. M. Van Cott, Rev. Dr. Tyng, and John Orcutt.

At the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, corner of Fifth-avenue and Tenth-street, the American Colonization Society held a public meeting last evening in behalf of African colonization. The evening services were conducted as usual, after which Rev. J. COTTON SMITH, the pastor, with a few remarks on the Christian and benevolent character of the Society's object, introduced its Secretary, Mr. JOHN ORCUTT, who read a brief report of the Society and its work, since its organization at Washington in 1816. He said that from the first departure of colored freedmen in 1820 on board the Elizabeth, from New-York to Liberia, the tide of emigration increased every year until up to the present date the number of colonists landed on its shores amounted to 20,000 freedmen and unfortunates rescued from the captured slave-traders by our war vessels. During the last four years 2,400 persons have been sent thither, and nearly twice as many applications were made by those desirous of returning to the land of their fathers. He then read letters from some of those who had settled in Liberia for a long length of time, as well as late arrivals. All expressed the most complete satisfaction with the country and their prospects. There, they say, the population amounts to nearly 600,000, all doing well, enjoying the rights and privileges of a Republic whose Constitution is framed after that of the United States. These colored people have a college with thirty-three students at present, and there are fifty churches in the country. Now the Society holds 900 applications for passage to the new land, and although it owns a ship, and a building in Washington, yet needs $60,000 to carry on the good work of colonizing Africa with intelligent, Christian negroes.

Judge VAN COTT, of Brooklyn, was next introduced, and said that now the American Colonization Society, through its auxiliary in New-York, appeals for aid to push forward its work. He said that after reviewing the brilliant record of the working of the Society since its foundation, he could bear testimony to its efficiency. In fact, one need but to glance at the prosperous condition of that little republic, governed and ruled entirely by colored men, first established and nursed by this very society, to find ample proof of its success. Moreover, looking at the matter from another stand-point, we find that insurmountable prejudices prevent the negro from ever holding any but an inferior position in our land. It is impossible that the African and Caucasian race should commingle. How fearful, then, must be the knowledge of this inferiority, his state of things weigh upon the minds of the better classes of the blacks. It is but natural that he should want to go where he can advance himself and feel indeed a free man. Now, then, it is our duty as Americans to assist him to do it. We must bear in mind that our forefathers have transmitted to us a debt that payment of which Heaven itself exacts. We have enslaved, oppressed and crushed this people, and common justice demands of us this reparation. Also, be it remembered that these men and women bear with them to their kindred of their station and color the saving influences of Christianity. Shall we then, Christians, refuse to aid in the transmission of the "glad tidings" to these 100,000,000 of people, or leave them still in their heathenism?

Rev. Dr. TYNG followed Judge VAN COTT, and briefly related his knowledge of, and connection with, the Society. He urged the immediate necessity of sending all the better classes of freedmen applying for transmission, inasmuch as the last hope of African civilization now rests with the black race itself. We have seen, said he, two generations of white missionaries who have gone to their field of labor whence they have passed away, and how great has been their success. No; the chance of winning over to the foot of the cross their race is the work of the colored missionary colony and the Republic of Liberia. I ask you, every Christian man, then, to unite with this enterprise and aid in its accomplishment.

A collection was then taken up, and the meeting brought to a close.

Arrest and Escape of a Swindler.

A young man answering to the name of WM. H. TERRICK (an assumed name) was arrested at the instance of Mr. LEE, of the Young Men's Christian Association yesterday, at noon, and lodged in the Tenth Precinct Station-house, but made his escape before a charge could be preferred against him. This nice young man, who is of a light complexion, side whiskers, stout and well dressed, and hails from New-Orleans, asked Mr. LEE to assist in procuring him employment, and stated that he was destitute. He was furnished with bed and board and employed about the rooms until other work could be procured for him. He appeared religiously inclined, and gained the confidence of the Association by his free manners, polished address, and fervent prayers in the prayer meeting. The young scamp availed himself of the first opportunity to rob the drawer of the Assistant Secretary, obtained money due the Association on false pretenses, and forged letters of reference, signing them with Mr. Lee's name. Mr. LEE intends to follow him up, and make an example of him. His career indicates that he is a professional swindler, and it is to be hoped that he will be recaptured by the detectives who are after him.

Temperance Meeting at Cooper Institute.

A large meeting of the Sons of Temperance was held at Cooper Institute, last evening, Mr. STEPHEN MERRITT, Jr., presiding. After singing and prayer, Mr. GEORGE W. BUNGAY was introduced as "the great poet, writer and worker of the temperance cause." Mr. BUNGAY said that if temperance was not a part of religion it was at least the hand-maid of piety. He then went on to speak of the false deductions made from many expressions in the Bible relating to the drinking of intoxicating liquors, and showed that Holy Writ most emphatically denounced the use of such beverages. He spoke, also, of the advantages of education, but argued that no man can be called a gentleman, no matter what his culture, knowledge or ability may be, who indulges in intoxicating liquors. The true gentleman, he said, is he who earns his dinner before eating it, and abstains from all that may lower his manhood.

On the conclusion of Mr. BUNGAY's address, a letter was read from Mr. P. T. BARNUM, pleading sickness as his excuse for being absent.

Hon. ISRAEL BEALS was then introduced, and spoke at some length on the physical and moral aspect of the temperance question.

It was announced that a temperance meeting will be held, this evening, in the Thirty-first-street Baptist Church, at which Messrs. GREELEY and DUNN will speak.

SUDDEN DISAPPEARANCE.

Alleged Embezzlement of Nearly $200,000.

Purchaser of Revenue Collector Childs—Bailey Charged with Stealing Money Paid for Appointment—Sudden Disappearance of Mr. Bailey—Detectives Searching for the Collector.

The heavy defalcation of Collector BAILEY, and the mysterious disappearance of the latter, were matters of general discussion yesterday. Later reports in regard to his friends on the Government indicate that they will be much less anxious than at first supposed. We are informed by a prominent Government official that the entire amount is nearly $200,000. The extent of his embezzlements has already been ascertained to be over $100,000, and it is expected that it will be found to be very much greater when the present investigation, now being conducted by District-Attorney PIERREPONT, Solicitor HAMLIN, of the Treasury Department; Solicitor SHIRK, of the Internal Revenue Department; and Col. WHITELEY, of the Secret Service Division, is completed.

ABSENCE OF DEPUTY COLLECTOR CHILDS.

On Saturday afternoon last Col. WHITELEY received orders to arrest E. S. CHILDS, Mr. BAILEY's Chief Deputy Collector, on a charge of having aided and abetted in the frauds. CHILDS, who has held a position in the revenue service for several years, was taken into custody the same afternoon, after which, it is understood, he made a confession, showing the manner in which the frauds were committed. He said they commenced about four years ago, while BAILEY was Collector of the Fourth Revenue District, and were subsequently carried on in a more systematic and extensive manner on the latter's removal to the Thirty-second District of New-York, in 1869. He also stated, the chief of complicity made against him. He said he was in the habit of making up false assessment rolls in obedience to Mr. BAILEY's directions. The moneys which he received as tax from merchants who had been assessed were not credited on the rolls, but were appropriated by Mr. BAILEY for his own private use. The frauds were kept from discovery at the Internal Revenue Commissioner's office at Washington by reporting the money so embezzled as uncollected. Various amounts were abstracted and the guilty transactions covered up in a kind way at frequent intervals during the past year.

CHILDS, it is said, is of the opinion that the peculations so committed will not reach above one hundred thousand dollars. He represents BAILEY as being deficient in his accounts with the Government to about forty thousand dollars at the time of his leaving the Fourth District in the Spring of 1869. This deficit was made up by money stolen in the Thirty-second District. CHILDS is also of the belief that BAILEY intended to pay back every cent of the money which he had wrongfully withheld from the Government, but was prevented from so doing through misfortune and bad business management. At present, CHILDS is in charge of Col. WHITELEY. The statements made by him concerning the frauds have been taken as evidence against BAILEY.

WHAT BAILEY TOOK WITH HIM.

There is good authority for stating that there is no adequate reason to suppose that BAILEY took his flight with only a small amount of money in his possession. It is thought he converted a large amount of Government funds in his office to his own use at the time he decamped, but the Investigating Committee is unable to learn anything positive about the matter at present. If he has taken money with him, as suspected, his frauds will probably reach $200,000, as already stated.

WHAT HE MADE PREVIOUSLY.

It is well known that Mr. BAILEY derived a handsome fortune from whisky profits during his official career. The amount is said by some to be quite high as $150,000. What use he made of this money, and of the large sums which he stole from the Government, is a matter of public speculation. He was not generally regarded as a fast man, and was not known to be a gambler or a person who frequented South Bay shore resorts. He was represented, however, as being the owner of several fast horses, and also of a large, well-stocked farm in New-Hampshire for which he paid $65,000 in cash. He is also said to have expended numerous sums in costly dinners and entertainments, given by him to prominent officials and gentlemen whose influence and support he was desirous of receiving. He lived in a large residence in East Twenty-second-street, but did not display any particular extravagance there. The most plausible supposition on the part of those who knew him is that he used a considerable portion of his gains in carrying on his whisky trade and trade on liquor dealers, beside giving a liberal share to corrupt persons who were in his employ.

PROBABLE IMPLICATION OF OTHERS.

It is also alleged that he shared his spoils of office with other high Government office-holders, whose transactions with BAILEY, it is asserted, are likely to be exposed in the course of the present investigation. It is believed in certain quarters that if the full history of the frauds in the Third Ward Collectorship can be made, it would be likely to implicate several other persons besides BAILEY. Some of those who are suspected of having participated in his iniquities are now being watched. The flight of Mr. BAILEY was not known to Mr. PIERREPONT and his colleagues on the Investigation Committee until Saturday last, up to which time they had worked out any clear evidence of his guilt. It is reported that his removal from the Collectorship was determined on several days previous, and that this fact, on being communicated to him by some high official friend at Washington, was one of the things which led to

HIS SECRET AND HASTY DEPARTURE.

It is said that he saw defeat on every side, and that he was afraid to stay and encounter the formidable array of strict Yankee Tory, and expose himself to the parties whom he had robbed. Just after his escape a dispatch was received at his office from one B. STAGG, dated at San Francisco. The contents related in some way to the seizure of R. WEBSTER & Co.'s place in that City, which was recently made by Collector BAILEY, and announced that a compromise could be made with certain whisky men in California, provided he (BAILEY) was willing. STAGG is mentioned as having been one of the private detectives employed by Mr. BAILEY, and is accused of having been concerned in alleged black-mailing operations of a Chicago. His dispatch is now in the hands of Collector BARFIELD.

COL. WHITELEY'S ASSISTANTS

were actively engaged, yesterday, in looking after the defaulting Collector. Although they could obtain no clew to his whereabouts, they feel confident that they will hear something about it in a very short time, and that they will be able to bring him to this City under arrest. Mr. CHILDS is now confined. Knowing more in regard to Mr. BAILEY's hiding-place than he chooses to tell. What lends strength to the supposition is the fact that a few of BAILEY's intimate friends have made endeavors to procure CHILDS' release, for fear, it is thought, that he might divulge some secrets which they would not like to have told. The evidence of

of BAILEY's is as follows:

Mr. BAILEY, while Collector of the Fourth District, sent to one Peter MARK, Edward ALLEN, on Jan. 16, 1867, to transport from his distillery in the First District of California six hundred barrels of whisky. The official destination of the whisky was to be the bonded warehouse of MCCONDRAY & Co., in San Francisco. It subsequently transpired that the bonded warehouse and the firm were altogether mythical, and that the liquor was never transported to California. The whole amount of the bonds—estimated at sixty thousand dollars—stands charged to Mr. BAILEY's account as Collector of the District. When an investigation was made about the matter it was found that the sureties were men of straw. WILLIAM H. CHASE, one of the number, was described as living at No. 467 Sixth-avenue, and as owning property valued at $50,000; but sweet WILLIAM was not known in the house which he had given as his permanent residence, and it was found to be occupied by a respectable dry-goods merchant. JAMES FURY, another of the bogus bondsmen, had died before the instrument was prepared, and his name was assumed by some sharper. The bond itself, it appears, was not in any very proper place of deposit, and was never used. It was missing until recently, when papers authenticating the security for the bond were filed in Washington. The bonds forwarded, however, were only for a small portion of the goods. The principal, FRANK EDWARDS, is said to have disappeared.

FORMER CHARGES.

At the time of BAILEY's nomination for Collector of the Thirty-second District a determined movement was made by a large number of whisky merchants for the purpose of preventing his confirmation by the Senate. Among the means taken to defeat him was the circulation of a paper for the private information of Senators, entitled "Reasons Against the Confirmation of Mr. BAILEY as Collector of the Thirty-second District." Of the charges which were then made the following gives a sufficient idea:

It is charged that he not only should not be promoted, but that he should be dismissed from the position which he now holds. In support of these charges, reference is respectfully made to sundry particular charges now put by Mr. BAILEY, who filed the Committee of the Senate, made in detail, with the proofs of criminality appended to each case, who will fully verify all the allegations therein contained, if they are called and examined. Some of the charges ready on file are made under oath, and the case party was before the Committee on Finance and sworn in relation to his own case. He was contradicted in one particular on the part by Mr. BAILEY, who filed that he had reported the case of JOHN TRACEY & Co. to the Department. An examination of the records will show that Mr. BAILEY's statement is absolutely false.

MALFEASANCE IN OFFICE.

Among the many acts of malfeasance in office with which he is formally charged are the following, to wit:

On the 21st of October, 1867, he seized the establishment of JOSEPH JONES & Co., not in his district. He afterward released the place when Mr. JONES had [illegible]

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

Capt. Arthur, of Elizabeth, N. J., After a Mysterious Disappearance of Months, Starts for His Home, Which He Fails to Reach.

On the morning of the 2d of February, Capt. JOHN ARTHUR, at that time residing at No. 228 South Third-street, Brooklyn, E. D., left his home for this City, for the purpose of collecting some out-standing bills and for the transaction of other business, and has not been heard of since the afternoon of the day he left. Since the day following his disappearance he has been anxiously and earnestly searched for by his many relatives and friends, and also diligently and carefully by the Police; and yet no tidings have been gained of him, alive or dead. He was an unusually active man, under thirty years of age, remarkably correct in habits and singularly earnest and energetic in business. Prior to his engagement in business here, he had improved a large farm on Long Island, which he owned; but that selling not returning profit, either as largely or as quickly as he desired, he had taken a sloop and crew and engaged in the collection of fish and the manufacture of oil, near Blue Point, on Great South Bay. While thus engaged, he entered into a contract with Mr. GOODKIND, of Wall-street, for the supply of fish for the latter's oil factory on Barren Island, during the season; and during the remainder of the year was engaged in the transportation of freight to and from the other towns of this City.

A short time previous to his disappearance it had become necessary for him to procure another sloop, and with a view to that he was engaged in the collection of money on bills on the day we name. Leaving home, he promised his wife to return for dinner at 4 P. M. Soon afterward, he met Mr. Barry, who was an old Blue Point acquaintance, whom he invited to spend the evening at his home. He is known to have called subsequently at a down-town bank and had a check cashed, and, at about 1 P. M., he was at the office of Mr. GOODKIND, in Wall-street, where two gentlemen were waiting to see him nearly an hour, when, with the remark that he would go home and call on the following day, he left, and no subsequent trace has been found.

It was known at his home, and he had mentioned it to the friend he met, and also at the Wall-street office, that, in a day or two, he was going out on Great South Bay shore to obtain a sloop. Thinking it possible, though exceedingly improbable, that he had heard news of a sloop which caused him to leave suddenly, the entire shores of Long Island, along which he was well known have been searched without avail.

The vicinity of the foot of Houston-street here, where the Island sloops lie while awaiting cargo, and every other point which he was likely to visit in search of business information, have all been carefully examined, and nothing has been heard of him at any of them, except that on the previous day he was at the foot of Houston-street trying to buy a sloop. When every reasonable source of information had been sought, that of the clairvoyants was added to the skill of the detective Police, but their revelations, when not purely ridiculous, proved positively false. And thus stands his case today.

That he has been doubtless foully dealt with by some of the many who know his business, his search for a sloop, and the fact that he was collecting his money for its purchase, is hardly doubted by any of his relatives and numerous acquaintances. It would seem impossible that at that time of the day any man could have left this City, and, by any conceivable line between Wall-street and the Williamsburg ferries, without its having been seen by some one and instantly made known. His friends unite in the conclusion that some one knowing his business that day and his object the succeeding day, has induced him to enter some prepared hiding-place, or secured his passage, or there was some one there who had a sloop to sell, or knew of one he could buy; and that while there he has been murdered and robbed. What amount of money he had with him is not known to his friends, for the reason that he had his book of accounts with him, and no record remained at home.

There are few men on the Island whose mysterious disappearance could have caused more general interest than that of Capt. ARTHUR, and yet, notwithstanding all their search, and the fact that we, in common with all of the Associated Press, made note of his disappearance soon after it occurred, there is not a trace of him has been found, though search has never been discontinued a single day.

Melancholy Suicide in Brooklyn.

Yesterday, at 2½ P. M., the family of Mr. GARRESCHE, residing in Ninth-street, near Third-avenue, were startled by the sound of a pistol, proceeding from the room of Mr. J. L. GARRESCHE, the younger brother of the master of the house. Totally unprepared for anything serious, they were inexpressibly shocked to find the occupant of the apartment lying on the floor dead from a pistol-shot aimed at his heart by his own hand. He was twenty-seven years of age, a native of New-Jersey, and a young man of most unexceptionable character and more than average intelligence. He was of a deeply religious turn of mind, and was an active member of the Lutheran Church. For some months back he has been laboring under the effects of a severe cold and appears to have given way to a settled depression of spirits. He is believed to have had a constitutional predisposition to disease of the heart. Beyond these general causes no motive can be assigned for an event which has cast a sudden gloom over a happy and place household.
